Indians Beat Boston, 8-3, In Playoff For Pennant

Boudreau Sparks Team With Two Homers as Bearden Hurls 5-Hit Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, Oct. 4.—Manager Lou Boudreau backed his master-minding with his own swing-from-the-heels bat that produced two home runs, two singles and the American League pennant for his Cleveland Indians today.

They beat the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 3, this glum afternoon for 33,957 Fenway Park fans, in the playoff of their pennant tie, but it was no photo finish as the Indians interred Boston in second place.

Boudreau showed the Indians how, and they responded to win Cleveland's first pennant in 28 seasons. He whacked out a home run in his first time at bat, banged another one his third time up, hit those two singles for a perfect day, and found a pair of coheroes in Gene Bearden and Ken Keltner.

20th Victory For Bearden

To the 27-year-old Bearden, his rookie left-hander cast off by the Yankees, Boudreau turned today in the vital play-off game and from him he got a superb five-hit performance. The Indian's prize rookie turned in his twentieth victory of his freshman year.

And from Ken Keltner, his veteran third baseman, Boudreau got the big blow of the ball game—a three-run homer off Denny Galehouse that shattered a 1-1 stalemate in the fourth inning and packaged the pennant for Cleveland.

At the finish, with Fenway Park fans in a dreary hush at the futility of the Red Sox, the sports-shirted figure of Bill Veeck bolted out of his box seat near the dugout to celebrate the Cleveland victory. Hippety-hopping on his artificial leg, he went to embrace Boudreau and Bearden and Keltner and any other Indian who was handy.

Pitched With 1 Day's Rest

Red Sox fans, stunned, dismayed and disappointed, did finally raise a sportsmanlike cheer as the jubilant Indians, with Johnny Berardino and Boudreau himself in the foreground, raised Bearden to their shoulders and gave him a triumphant chariot-ride off the field.

With one day's rest young Bearden had gone back in there for the Indians after beating Detroit in a vital game on Saturday, and he was Boudreau's choice against what was supposed to be the suicidal effect of pitching a left-hander at the Red Sox.

But today the Indians turned against the Boston club the latter's own instrument—a short left-field wall that was supposed to be going for the Red Sox in this play-off game—and peppered it and scaled it to move into the World Series against the Braves on Wednesday.

Sure, Bobby Doerr hit a two-run homer that put the Red Sox back into the ball game briefly when they narrowed the score to 6-3 in the sixth inning, but no other Bostonian took such liberties with Bearden's explosive curve ball. And in contrast the Indians were drawing a bead on the fence all afternoon.

Thirteen hits they pounded out to batter down Boston. Boudreau, then Keltner, then Boudreau again

Schafer Quits As Alexandria Health Chief

Difference of Opinion With Some Officials Cited in Resignation

Dr. W. Lewis Schafer, Alexandria City health officer since 1929, resigned his post yesterday because of what he termed "differences of opinion with some city officials."

Dr. Schafer

His action was the latest development in a controversy over effectiveness of the city's health program. The program has been under study by the Health Department for several months as a result of criticism directed by the League of Woven Voters in a pamphlet published last April.

Although a report of the State survey is now in the hands of the city council for study, Schafer said it was not connected with his resignation.

"I have not seen the report," Dr. Schafer told The Washington Post, "and inasmuch as my resignation is effective immediately, I doubt very much that I will see it."

He declined to elaborate on the "difference of opinion" cited as the cause for his resignation, but emphasized that there would be no reconsideration of his action. He said he has no immediate plans for the future.

City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto, apparently surprised that Schafer's action was public knowledge, declined comment. He admitted he had received the written resignation yesterday afternoon after an earlier conference with Schafer, but said he had not had time to give it "full consideration."

Mayor William T. Wilkins expressed surprise at Schafer's resignation, but said he had no comment and had "no idea what he meant by differences with some city officials." He said he had not talked with Dr. Schafer since the health officer was asked to appear before a closed meeting of the city council in June to explain reported shortcomings of the health program.

10-Cent Rise Granted Two Rail Unions

175,000 Operating Personnel Affected; Had Asked 25 Pct.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Nation's railroads agreed today to a 10-cents-an-hour wage increase, effective October 16, for 175,000 operating railroad personnel.

The increase covers conductors, trainmen, yardmen, yardmasters, and dining car employes represented by the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The two unions had asked for a wage increase of 25 per cent.

Announcement of the settlement was made jointly by H. W. Fraser, president of the conductors union; D. A. MacKinzie, assistant president of the trainmen, and Daniel P. Loomis, chairman of the western railroads' wage committee in behalf of the carriers.

Loomis estimated the new increases would add $55,665,000 a year to the railroads' labor costs, including payroll taxes. He said that if this same increase is applied to all railroad workers the carriers' operating costs would rise $381,175,000 annually.

Negotiations are still pending on the demands for wage increases for three other operating unions and 16 nonoperating groups.

These three unions, which claim 250,000 members, are the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Switchmen's Union, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

In Cleveland, a statement from those three unions said a settlement for 10 cents "would put rail employes further than ever behind the cost of living. We cannot slap our men in the face with such a settlement.

"It was charged earlier this spring that politics was playing a major part in this wage movement and it may be significant to note that the leader of one of the brotherhoods which settled today for 10 cents called on President Truman at the White House today."

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, called on the President today.

The engineers and firemen are asking increases of $1.76 a day.

Bucky Harris Out As Yankee Manager

The New York Yankees yesterday failed to renew the contract of Manager Bucky Harris. Harris and Yankee officials said it was a "mutual agreement."

Team officials said several names were under consideration for the managerial job, none of them, however, being players on the 1948 team. A new manager would be named soon, they added.

23 Rescued After Plane Is Forced Down

(From Press Dispatch)

Miami, Fla., Oct. 4.—A 28-year-old pilot related today how he saved 23 lives including his own when he made an emergency landing with a DC-3 in pitch darkness on a small Bahamas island.

"Just routine," said Pilot Richard R. Olivere, "just routine."

But in Nassau, RAF Wing Commander E. H. Coleman, director of the Bahamas civil aviation, who flew to the scene of the crash landing, said it was a "most amazing landing, especially at night."

The four crew members and 19 Puerto Rican passengers were brought to Miami tonight by U. S. Coast Guard rescue planes after being stranded on the island for 17 hours.

Lost Over Atlantic

The twin-engined charter airliner, flying the 19 Puerto Ricans back to their native land from New York City, became lost over the Atlantic at midnight Sunday with its fuel tanks ruhning dry.

It was last heard from at 2:35 a. m., while it was searching the cluster of small keys 125 miles east of Miami for a good spot to land.

Olivere said he was heading for Miami to pick up another pilot, refuel and continue on to San Juan, Puerto Rico, when he became aware that his plane had drifted far off its course.

"I recognized where I was when I spotted islands below," he said. "I might have been able to make Nassau, but I didn't want to guess. Fuel was too low.

"I made a pass at this beach and dropped flares. They didn't work. So I used my landing lights. The beach was just wide enough to get in."

"Marvelous Landing"

Lieut. W. N. Durham, one of the Coast Guard PBM pilots who flew to the rescue, said it was a "marvelous landing."

"He came in, in pitch darkness," said Durham, "on a strip of beach 75 feet wide, with the sea on one side and a jagged coral ledge on the other."

The landing was made on Haines Cay in the Berry Island group, about 60 miles northeast of Nassau. The plane slid 600 feet on its belly in the soft sand in the landing, stopped and dropped over on its left wing. The left wing tip was resting in the water. It later slid down the beach.

Olivere said the passengers climbed out through the windows and helped right the plane on the beach. He said the only damage was to the propellers.

Passengers Remain Calm

The passengers, all men from 20 to 60 years and Puerto Rican laborers, "remained calm and took it very well," according to Ruth Benden, 30, of Hillsdale, N. J., the plane's stewardess and only woman aboard.

The missing plane was sighted at 2 p. m. by one of 14 military planes searching the area and two big Coast Guard flying boats were sent to the scene to rescue the stranded party.

Vandenberg Hails 2-Party Cooperation

Predicts GOP Win But Would Keep Present Bipartisan Foreign Policy

By The Associated Press

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) last night described national unity as the best peace insurance and said United States voters can change the National Administration "without affecting the continuity of our foreign policy."

At the same time, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee condemned Russia's attitude on the Berlin blockade as a "threat to everybody's peace, our own emphatically included."

Vandenberg predicted the election of Republican Thomas E. Dewey as President in indirect but unmistakable language. He said the Republicans cooperated with the Administration on a bipartisan foreign policy, and added:

"I express the belief that our patriotic, Democratic friends will follow this example when they are the 'opposition' come next January 20."

Praises Dewey and Warren

Vandenberg praised Dewey and his running mate, Gov. Earl Warren of California, calling them men of exceptional "administrative genius."

Vandenberg listed two major advantages in a bipartisan foreign policy:

"One: It permits our democracy to speak with a great degree of unity at critical moments . . .

"Two: It leaves us free to change our national administration, if such be the people's desire and advantage, without affecting the continuity of our foreign policy."

Vandenberg, veteran Senator from Michigan, stated the position of the Republican Party in a Nation-wide radio broadcast over CBS.

"Insurance for Peace"

Vandenberg stressed the Republican role in the Nation's so-called "bipartisan" foreign policy throughout his half-hour address. He said that during the past four years efforts to take American foreign affairs out of "partisan politics" have "to an important degree" succeeded, with credit to both major parties.

"In the face of any foreign problems, our unity is as important as our atom bombs," he declared. "It is particularly important as a discouragement to alien miscalculation which, otherwise, might lead to the mistaken belief that we are vulnerable because of our domestic divisions. It is our best available insurance for peace."

Before launching into a detailed report on Republican contributions to national unity, Vandenberg denounced the Russians in strong language. He said the Republicans: "Condemn transparent Soviet duplicity in rejecting our peace efforts to lift the Berlin blockade and to restore four-power tranquility on a live-and-let-live basis."

"We indict this Soviet record as a threat to everybody's peace, our own emphatically included," he said.

"We believe an equitable review of this whole problem in the United Nations is the best 'calculated risk' for peace. We offer

Soviet Challenges U.N. Authority to Consider Dispute Over Berlin

The Berlin Story

The West Met the Blockade Of Berlin With the Airlift And Urgent Appeal to Stalin

(This is the second of five articles on the Berlin crisis, based in part on the secret documents just published by the State Department.)

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.

THE IDEA of feeding a huge city by air was just an H. G. Wells fantasy until June 27 of this year.

On that blazing hot Sunday a group of high officials met in Army Secretary Kenneth Royall's office in the Pentagon Building. Royall, of course, was there; so were other officials from the defense services; and so was Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett, who had known plenty about aircraft as Assistant Secretary of War for air during the war.

The problem before them was clear-cut. The choice, as Lovett put it to them, was to abandon Berlin to the Russians, or to hang on. In itself Berlin was just a defenseless island in a Soviet sea. But to abandon it would condemn tens of thousands of anti-Communist Berliners to the labor camps of Siberia; would lead millions of other Germans to think we were pulling out of Europe; would weaken the resistance to communism in western Europe and would, in short, knock the props from under American foreign policy everywhere.

Could we hang on to Berlin? The military men weren't sure. They weren't sure how many planes it would take to keep the city fed and supplied, or how many big C-5[illegible] were available.

But they agreed without hesitation that the effort had to be made. They agreed that the blockade of Berlin had to be answered and countered by every cargo-carrying plane that could be mobilized.

The next morning the Pentagon conferees, with Secretaries Marshall, Forrestal and Royall, went to the White House to get presidential approval for their decision. They got it, and went to work. From the Pentagon orders went out to Hawaii, Alaska and Panama to rush C-54's to Germany. From the State Department a message flashed to Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas in London to ask the British what they could do.

BY THE NEXT DAY, a fleet of 39 C-54's was on its way to Germany, each plane able to carry 10 tons and to make at least three round trips a day from the Rhine airfields to Berlin. One squadron, on its way westward across the Pacific, was diverted in mid-air west of Hawaii and told to reverse course—for Germany!

In Frankfurt air crews arrived still wearing tropical uniforms, and shivered in the chilly north European weather. In the British zone of Berlin pleasure boats were ordered off the Havel Lake, so that big seaplanes from Hamburg could land their cargoes.

Near Tempelhof airfield gangs of Germans were put to work loading rubble onto 10-ton trucks, dumping a total of 40,000 truckloads on the airfield, crushing it to a depth of 18 inches with bulldozers, and coating it with asphalt from bombed-out streets to make a new 5500-foot runway.

Day and night the big C-54's and smaller C-47's landed at Tempelhof with their cargoes of flour, milk, bags of coal. Day after day the total tonnage flown in grew more impressive—first only 300 tons a day, then, a month later, 3000 tons a day. The airlift came to be a miracle and a marvel. The airmen themselves were astonished at what they could do.

German civilians clambered up the wooden wall alongside Tempelhof to watch the great planes being unloaded. At the far end of the field crowds of Germans strained their eyes to watch from the platform of the Russian-controlled elevated railway.

THIS was the first response by the Western Allies—to keep the blockaded city fed from the air. Few air officers imagined, however, that it could be more than a stopgap for a few weeks. So the second response, in those early days of July, was to use high level diplomacy, by all three allied governments working together, to get the blockade lifted. On July 6 the three Western powers delivered similar notes to the Soviet embassies in their respective capitals.

The American note, kept secret until the State Department published it the other day, told the Russians that the blockade had caused an "extremely serious international situation" and was "a clear violation of existing agreements."

It insisted that the United States was occupying its part of Berlin with free access "as a matter of established right deriving from the defeat and surrender of Germany and confirmed by formal agreements among the principal allies."

The note warned the Russians that the United States would "not be induced by threats, pressures or other actions to abandon these rights." For this reason, and for the sake of the people of Berlin, the United States demanded that the blockade be lifted.

Finally, the note said the United States was always willing to settle the Berlin quarrel by negotiation, or by arbitration, impartial inquiry or any other method provided in Article 33 of the Charter of the United Nations. But, the note said, the United States would not negotiate under duress, and not until the blockade had been lifted.

THE Soviet answer, dated July 14, was brutally frank. It claimed that "Berlin lies in the center of the Soviet zone and is a part of that zone"—a claim never before put forward officially.

Whatever rights the westerners may have had in Berlin, the Soviet note argued, the westerners have forfeited those rights by carrying out a separate currency reform in their zones, by circulating their new currency in Berlin, and by "the policy of the dis-

Vishinsky Denies Blockade Exists, Or That Peace Is Threatened

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—The Soviet Union challenged here this afternoon the competence of the Security Council of the United Nations to deal with the Berlin blockade as a threat to international peace and security.

Andrei I. Vishinsky, First Deputy Foreign Minister, denied there was a blockade of the city and characterized the claim there was a threat to the peace as "absurd" and urged the whole German question be considered by the Big Four powers alone in a Council of Foreign Ministers.

"Gentlemen," he said, turning to the representatives of the United States, Great Britain and France, "you've got the wrong address."

Soviet Stand Attacked

Vishinsky's contention that the Security Council had no right to include the issue on its agenda was attacked by the American, British and Belgian delegates, the only other members of the 11-nation group that spoke at the Palais de Chaillot today.

No decision was taken, however, after more than two hours of discussion and the debate was postponed in the end until 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Vishinsky's line followed the reasoning that has been behind the Russian case ever since the end of July when the Western states began direct negotiation at the Kremlin in an effort to raise the blockade of the former German capital, and it included many of the points of view expressed in the notes which the Soviet government sent yesterday to Washington, London and Paris.

That all this was inacceptable to the West became quickly apparent when the American delegate, Dr. Philip C. Jessup of New York, began his reply to Vishinsky.

Blockade Declared Threat

There is a blockade of Berlin, he said, and this blockade constitutes a threat to the peace. The threat will continue, he went on, as long as the blockade is maintained, and, since direct negotiation failed, it is now up to the United Nations to deal with the question. The only alternatives open to the Western states, he argued, were to "supinely bow to the Soviet use of force" or to employ force themselves to meet Soviet force.

He spoke in the clear, eloquent tones of a trained lawyer, sometimes ironically, always forcefully and never pulling a punch. The Russians were using "illegal and coercive measures." He had expected Vishinsky to object to U. N. examination of the "hostile" actions of his government. The Soviet Union has "consistently disregarded" its obligations under the Charter. It is still "employing force or the threat of force." It "repudiates its machinery." It seeks "unilateral freedom to resort to force."

Vishinsky Speaks Twice

Vishinsky spoke twice, the second time with more heated emphasis that he had employed in the first soft statement of his case.

"I insist this agenda should not be adopted by the Council," he concluded. "It would be a violation of the Charter and international agreements (Potsdam, Yalta, etc.). We shall not be a party to a violation of agreements."

His main points were:

1. The Berlin question is linked to the whole German problem. They cannot be separated. They must be studied together.

2. There is four-power machinery capable and designed to deal with the issue, the Council of Foreign Ministers.

3. The western states were disregarding their obligations and commitments by avoiding the Council of Foreign Ministers and turning to the U. N. Where is the CFM now? "Absent, being circumvented, frozen out, ignored," yet the CFM was "the legal way, the only legal way."

4. The threat-to-peace charge is "an absurd allegation designed to raise a hub-bub around the so-called blockade, although the blockade does not exist." It does not exist, he explained, because the Russians have offered to and are

$1.3 Million Thefts From Estate Of Father Laid to N. Y. Lawyer

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Leonard Bacon Clark, 42-year-old socially prominent New Yorker, was arrested today on a complaint charging he stole $1,362,000 from his father's estate.

Clark, Harvard-educated lawyer, was arrested after he was discharged from a hospital. District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Clark had been committed to the institution following a suicide attempt at the home of his mother in Bridgton, Me., last month.

Hogan said the lawyer lived lavishly while confiscating money left by his wealthy father, Eleazar W. Clark. The elder Clark sold a fleet of ships he had used in the rum and molasses trade to the Government for five million dollars early in World War I. He died in 1936.

Hogan accused Clark of resorting to an elaborate series of forgeries and security conversions to defraud his mother, Mrs. Eda E. Clark, 74, and his sister, Mrs. Virginia Clark Darneille of 2842 Chesterfield pl. nw., Washington, D. C.

(Neither Mrs. Clark nor Mrs. Darneille could be reached for comment. A servant at their residence here said they were in New York.)

Clark was arrested on a grand larceny charge.

Clark's mother and sister were trustees with him of the father's estate.

The lawyer began his alleged frauds soon after the elder Clark died in Bridgton, leaving $2,500,000 in cash, securities and real estate, Hogan declared.

"Our investigation shows that when he had converted everything he could lay his hands on, he attempted suicide," the district attorney added.

During the past three years, Hogan said, he spent $10,000 a year alone on his bills at the Yale, Harvard, West Side and River Clubs here.

Merchant Marine Controversy

Experts Disagree on Whether U. S. Should Lead in Shipping

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter
(Third of a Series)

Should America maintain a first-rate merchant marine, vieing with other nations for world leadership?

Surprising as it may seem to the man in the street, accustomed to American supremacy in most things, there is sharp disagreement on the question in top Government circles.

One group says yes, we must have a strong and modern merchant fleet, both for defense and to foster our foreign trade.

Others say no, that we can rely on the vessels of friendly powers for much of our shipping, both in peace and war.

It is an issue that should be settled by positive action one way or the other. If not, those who argue for the second-rate merchant marine will win by default. Neglect, inaction and apathy soon will put us back where we were 10 years ago—a poor fourth. And the question is too important to be dealt with in that manner.

Most advocates of a strong merchant marine, it is interesting to note, do not ask that the United States maintain its war-won supremacy. They are willing to give up the lead to Great Britain—traditional merchant fleet champion—as long as we stay in the running.

That is the stand taken by Navy and Maritime Commission leaders and the great bulk of shipping men. The opposition centers in the Department of State.

Criticism of the State Department among maritime men often is bitter. "Pro-British." "They're against us," and "State has never raised a hand to help the American merchant marine" are some of the milder comments heard.

They argue that the governments of other maritime powers strongly back up their shipping interests in the fight for world cargoes and in many cases discriminate against other vessels. A

Mother Saves Life of Son, 3, After Rescue From Fish Pond

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

A 3-year-old Colesville (Md.) boy, Leon Roger Mason, yesterday was saved by artificial respiration applied by his mother after he fell into a fish pond.

The mother, Mrs. Leroy W. Mason, wife of a plumbing and heating contractor at Paint Branch Farms subdivision, worked over the boy for 30 minutes before he showed signs of life.

Mrs. Mason told police she first became aware that something was amiss when a son, Otis, 5, appeared at the house holding his brother's cap in his hand.

Aware that Otis and Leon were playing together, Mrs. Mason began a search of the house and grounds. She found Leon, apparently dead, in a three-foot deep fish pond near the house.

The boy, floating face up, was clad in a tightly zipped waterproof snowsuit. His father said later the apparel probably kept him from sinking.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Sam Stavisky

In the midst of a run on one of his 500 banks, A. P. Giannini raced to the milling scene, shoved his way through the hysterical depositors, and piled bags of gold and silver on the counter for all to see.

Asked by newsmen for a reassuring statement, Giannini pointed to the gold and silver, and roared: "Money talks!"

This—the anecdote has it—stopped the run.

Amadeo Peter Giannin, who pyramided a vegetable peddler's cart into the world's biggest bank, has made money talk, squawk and stand on its sides. At the age of 73, Giannini is no longer regarded as a mere wizard or tycoon. Depending on who flips the coin, he is (heads) a "Colossus" or (tails) an "Octopus."

Antitrust charges were levelled yesterday against Giannini's seven-billion-dollar Transamerica Corp., a super-holding company which serves as a single basket for all of the onetime butter-and-egg-man's eggs.

Immediate reaction to this turn of the coin will most likely be the reemergence of the huge (6 feet 2 inches, 250 pounds) self-proclaimed roughneck-turned-banker from his third retirement.

"A. P.", first retired at the age of 31. Born in San Jose, Calif., the son of Italian immigrants, Amadeo forsook school to build up a thriving produce business. He accumulated $100,000 and announced his retirement in 1901.

Soon thereafter Giannini was offered a seat on the board of directors of a small San Francisco bank. "A. P." accepted. But his ideas on running a bank were unacceptable to the other directors, who lost little time in giving the newcomer the old heave-ho.

Incensed, the former peddler set up shop—that is, a competing bank—across the street, and laid the cornerstone in 1904 of what is today the Bank of America with some 500 branches interlacing California's financial bloodstream. Bank of America is the big egg in Transamerica Corp.'s basket.

Giannini admittedly was no banker; but he'd been a smart huckster, had a howitzer-voice and a memory-machine mind for names. He went out after depositors and lenders just like a door-to-door peddler goes after customers. He made loans to the "little people." He gave them all kinds of service; did everything "but blow their noses for them."

"A. P." survived both the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 and the bank panic of 1907, through foresight and luck. The panic, though, convinced him small banks weren't safe by themselves. Whereupon he started to branch out all over the State, and through various devices, into neighboring States despite bitter opposition.

In 1927 the "Big Bull of the West" charged into the big time of Wall Street and ran head on into crash of Giannini stock one full year before the market collapse of October, 1929. "A. P.," seriously ill from polyneuritis, managed to pull the pieces together into Transamerica Corp. He even turned to Wall Street for help. He transferred direction of the huge holding company over to Elisha Walker; then considered one of the bright lights of Wall Street, and in 1929 retired for a second time.

After the big bust of '29, Walker sought to reorganize Transamerica and the vast network of Giannini interests—which "A. P." had run from his head and vest pocket. Too much "wind and water" in the empire, Walker clamied.

Such treatment of "my baby," Giannini's phrase for his sprawling financial empire, aroused the 60-year-old, ailing "A. P." to new fury, and within a matter of months he had gathered up enough proxies to wrest control back into his vest pocket.

Throughout the years Giannini boasted that his toughest task was refraining from becoming a millionaire. There are those who raise a quizzed eyebrow to this boast.

Various State and Federal agencies have investigated Giannini's activities. Securities Exchange Commission took eight years and 200 volumes of testimony before dismissing charges.

Now the Federal Reserve Board will weigh new charges against Giannini and his Transamerica. The charge is violation of the antitrust laws, but it's really just another facet of the same old argument: Colussus or Octopus?

Hearing Set On Giannini Trust Charge

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Charges that the Giannini-controlled Transamerica Corp. of San Francisco has built up a "credit monopoly" in five Western States, will be aired here October 12.

The hearings will be public at the request of Transamerica, the Federal Reserve Board announced.

It is the first time the Reserve Board has brought any action under the Clayton Antitrust Act passed in 1914. That act permits the Federal Reserve Board to make the charges and to sit as a "court" to pass on the evidence.

The charges allege that Transamerica, headed by A. P. Giannini of the famous California banking family, violated the Antitrust Act by placing directors on the boards of banks in the huge Bank of America chain in California, and on other banks in Oregon, Washington, Arizona and Nevada. More than 500 banks and industrial concerns have Transamerica director on their boards, the Reserve Board charges.

Original charges were filed June 24, the Reserve Board's announcement reveals. If sustained the board can order the Trans-America to get rid of its stock in many of the banks.

The corporation said in a statement in San Francisco: "There is no foundation" for the charges against it. It expressed confidence the proceeding "will prove as groundless as other similar proceedings to which it has been subject in recent years, all of which have resulted favorably to the corporation."

"In the opinion of the corporation," the statement said, "the board does not have jurisdiction."

Since the date of filing the complaint in June, Comptroller of the Currency Preston Delano, supervisor of national banks, has authorized the Bank of America to open a number of new branches in California. Both Delano and Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, said the authorization was given to provide credit facilities in places where such facilities were needed, and that it did not imply any opinion regarding the Reserve Board's complaint.

The widespread operations of the Giannini system has been in the news for several months. A congressional hearing last winter revealed that the Justice Department has studied the possibility of anti-trust action under the Sherman Act as far back as 1945. Evidence indicated at that time that the case was not pursued because Government attorneys were doubtful if they could win.

Although the Justice Department was not employed in the present case the Reserve Board can call upon that department to enforce any order it may issue against Transamerica.

The Transamerica case was brought into the replacement of Marriner S. Eccles as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board last winter by Thomas B. McCabe, Philadelphia industrialist. In considering confirmation of McCabe, Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) of the Senate Banking Committee, inquiring if Eccles weren't being displaced by President Truman at the instance of the Giannini group.

Eccles and A. P. Giannini had long been engaged in a public feud over a bill sponsored by Eccles to let the Reserve Board regulate bank holding companies. The bill, although considered by several sessions of Congress, has never been passed.

At the committee's hearings Secretary of the Treasury Snyder was asked if he had had any part in the demotion of Eccles. He said he had not, although he agreed that he had discussed the change with former Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton.

Snyder also refused to answer an inquiry by Tobey if he had been offered a job by the Giannini either at a dinner party in Miami or later in Washington. Snyder replied he had "no intention of leaving" his Treasury post.

Snyder declared he had once told Attorney General Tom Clark that if there was "any ground on which to bring action against Transamerica, I thought they (the Justice Department) ought to proceed."

Snyder said he was in favor of a "proper bank holding company act" but didn't indorse the Eccles bill.

Eccles was ousted as chairman of the Reserve Board by President Truman last February 1. He has continued to serve as one of the members. On July 30 he told the Senate Banking Committee that he thought he had been demoted because he had "offended certain individuals and certain groups that benefited from inflation."

Airlift Decision of June 27 Mapped an Uncharted Course

memberment of Germany"—namely, the policy adopted in London in March of setting up a German governmental authority in western Germany.

The Soviet army had conquered Berlin and also Vienna, the note said, and the Western armies were "given the opportunity to enter" those cities on condition that agreements elsewhere in Germany and Austria were observed. Since those agreements had been "violated," the Western Allies had only themselves to blame for the troubles inflicted on the people of Berlin.

The note complained bitterly of the western currency reform, saying that "the entire mass of currency notes which were canceled in the western zone threatened to pour into Berlin and the Soviet zone." It said Russia would not object to four-power negotiations, but only if they also covered broader questions of Germany. And it flatly refused to lift the blockade or to accept "any preliminary conditions whatsoever."

The Russians no longer pleaded "technical difficulties." In the western capitals the blast from the Kremlin made it clear that Russia wanted one or both of two things—to get the Western Allies out of Berlin altogether, and to reverse or delay the decision to set up a western German regime. Either one of these would be a smashing success for Soviet diplomacy and Soviet policy.

PERHAPS for this reason, American military men in Germany talked openly at this time of pushing an armed convoy up the Autobahn into Berlin, on the theory that the Russians would back down when confronted by a show of force. Former Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan of the wartime Office of Strategic Services talked in this strain at a press conference in Berlin, held under General Clay's auspices, and the tremors of excitement spread to Washington.

Neither Secretary Marshall nor the defense chiefs, nor the British and French governments, would have approved any impulsive action. General Clay hurried home for "consultations." The "telecom" flashed teletype messages onto big screens in embassies and government offices in Paris, London and Washington, in the intricate work of keeping three governments in step.

The three allies still had diplomatic cards to play, and the airlift was giving time to play them. They decided to take the Berlin issue to Stalin himself.

On July 30, the Western envoys in Moscow asked for an appointment with Foreign Minister Molotov; being told he was on vacation, they saw Deputy Foreign Minister Zorin. They handed him a memorandum stressing the "gravity" of the situation, reasserting their right to be in Berlin, and asking for an interview with Stalin.

The next evening they saw Molotov, who repeated that his government saw no point in discussing Berlin except within the framework of discussions about Germany as a whole.

Still, Molotov said he "hoped" Stalin would agree to talk. Two days later, on the evening of August 2, the three drove through the gate of the Kremlin for their meeting with Stalin.

Diplomats Virtually Confined To Moscow by Soviet Orders

By The Associated Press

Russia in a new order has virtually confined American and other foreign diplomats to the city of Moscow, the State Department said yesterday.

A set of Soviet travel restrictions putting nearly all Russia off limit to representatives of other nations was disclosed here with the explanation that Soviet censors have refused to let Moscow correspondents file the news for the last four days.

The official announcement was accompanied by hints from diplomatic authorities that some retaliatory measures are under consideration by American officials. Soviet officials in this country are as free to travel about the United States as Americans.

Order Delivered Thursday

The new order was in a note delivered by the Foreign Office to the American Embassy in Moscow last Thursday. It means, the State Department declared, that "to all intents and purposes members of the foreign missions are restricted to Moscow city limits."

The order supplements a 1941 regulation. It contains an expanded list of localities within or to which travel is prohibited for members of the staffs of foreign diplomatic missions and consulates. The State Department's announcement did not give the entire text but said that "for all practical purposes the list covers the entire territory of the USSR, the principal additions being the newly acquired territories, such as Sakhalin."

Restrictions Outlined

This is the island north of Japan which was handed over to Russia by a wartime Allied agreement. Japan formerly had the southern half.

A footnote said that within a radius of 50 kilometers (30 miles) from Moscow the foreigners will be permitted to make trips without getting official permits from the Foreign Office or military officials. But within this area eight districts were listed as off limits. Further, the State Department noted that these prohibited areas barred access to others which were left open to visits.

Air Force Lifts Ground Order Against F-84s

The Air Force last night removed a grounding order against its F-84 Thunderjets.

The fighters were grounded last week pending investigation of several recent crashes.

On their return to the air, the Air Force said, the jets will be restricted against flying with wingtip tanks. These external tanks have been used to increase range.

7 Filipinos Wounded Near U. S. Airfield

Manila, Philippines, (Tuesday), Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Seven Filipinos, including one woman and one military policeman, were wounded last night in a shooting incident near the United States air base at Clark Field, it was announced today. The attackers were not identified.

Yak Fighters Buzz Two British Planes

Berlin, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Russian Yak fighter planes today buzzed a British transport with 25 persons aboard and flew "dangerously near" a British cargo plane piloted by Air Vice Marshal Don Bennet, British sources reported.

British quarters said the Russian plane made an "offensive pass" at the British European Airways plane. A written protest was filed immediately with the Russians at the Berlin four-power air safety center, they added.

Soviet Complaints Rejected

This latest move in the Berlin "war of nerves" coincided with an American rejection of Russian complaints that United States pilots were guilty of 86 air safety violations between August 20 and October 1.

Maj. Gen. George P. Hays, deputy American military governor, rejected the Soviet complaint as "in error." The complaint was filed last night and warned of "serious consequences" which could result from such violations. A similar complaint charged British pilots with 656 violations during the same 40-day period.

Berlin City Elections Blocked by Russia

Berlin, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—Berlin city officials said today municipal elections will not be held November 14 as scheduled because the Soviets have refused to permit the printing of posters and election regulations in the Russian sector.

Reporters were told at a news conference that the Soviet Central Kommandatura had effectively spiked election plans.

Sausage Comes Down And Nobody Is Happy

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 4 (A.P.).—Meat came down fast here today, but nobody was happy about it. A sausage stuffer at the Swift & Co. plant exploded on the sixth floor of the packing house and showered meat in all directions. Sausage flew out of the windows and rained down on passing motorists and pedestrians. An official estimated that 750 pounds of it splattered against the walls or was shot out the window. No one was injured.

U. S. Demands Reds Define A-Bomb Stand

Paris, Oct. 4 (A.P.).—United States Delegate Warren R. Austin said today that Russia has indicated by her speeches that she is not ready to accept effective international control of the atomic bomb.

He challenged the Soviet Union to make her position clear, declaring the time for throwing "old tomato cans and dead cats" in United Nations debate is over.

Austin spoke before the U. N. Assembly's Political Committee in reply to Russia's surprise switch in tactics. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky startled the committee Saturday with a resolution calling for simultaneous treaties banning the atomic bomb and establishisg international atomic controls.

Austin asked Vishinsky what he meant by "effective control" mentioned in the Soviet resolution. He said the United States and the majority of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission wanted effective controls and if both sides meant the same thing the task was simple.

"Their (the Russian) debate indicates, on the contrary, that they are not ready for effective international control," Austin said. "They still adhere to nationalism. There is a chasm that must be bridged in their debate and their resolution."

The United States delegate struck at repeated Soviet demands for destruction of existing stockpiles of atomic weapons. He said the casing for the bomb can be made in any machine shop and that no one had called for destruction of the nuclear fuel that goes into the bomb.

5. To adopt the agenda would be to "confirm" the items on the agenda. This would be illegal, for Article 107 of the Charter specifically prevents U. N. action in connection with a former enemy state.

6. The west was trying to use the U. N. as a "screen" to avoid obligations based on previous agreements.

Fernand van Langenhove of Belgium (Prime Minister Paul-Henri Spaak sat behind him) suggested that adoption of the gaenda did not mean recognition of the validity of the western case.

As for Article 107, both Dr. Jessup and Sir Alexander Cadogan, of Great Britain, insisted it only covered disputes with a former enemy state and not disputes between members of the United Nations concerning a former enemy state.

While this discussion was going on, a special meeting was taking place at the Quai d'Orsay, attended by George C. Marshall, American Secretary of State, Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Minister, and Robert Schuman, French Foreign Minister. Among other items, concerning Western defense, they talked of the latest Soviet note, which as Dr. Jessup announced to the Security Council "changes nothing"—"because the Soviet Union still refuses to lift the blockade"

Most French Coal Miners Go on Strike

By Stephen White

Paris, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—Almost to a man, France's 325,000 coal miners left their jobs today to begin a strike that holds a menace for Europe's entire recovery program.

There were no disorders reported during the first hours of the strike. The miners simply failed to report for work. In some cases, pickets were thrown about pits, but their duties were nominal.

Although strike votes were taken primarily among the 200,000 miners in the northern coal areas, their fellow workers in the south of France heeded the plea to cooperate and make the strike nationwide.

Many workers in bauxite and iron also are on strike, and to add the proper modern touch, 75 per cent of the small group mining uranium in France also walked off the job. The city of Bordeaux was faced with a strike of garbage collectors.

Man Burned, Overcome By Smoke in Blaze

John G. Richardson, 55-year-old iron worker, was in critical condition at Emergency Hospital last night from smoke inhalation and slight burns suffered in a blaze at 1214 12th st. nw.

Police said he was in the front second-floor room of the house when fire broke out at about 7 p. m. Miss Susie C. Theil, 20, a Department of the Army employe, first noticed the blaze from the third floor and telephoned police. Her first attempt at escape down an outside stairway was blocked by flames, but she managed to leave by the indoor stairs.

Self-Guiding Bomb Latest Air Weapon

Elgin Field, Fla., Oct. 4 (AP).—This proving ground of the Air Force has an uncanny bomb which is designed to guide its own fall onto enemy ships, factories, oil refineries or other targets giving off heat.

Observers visiting "Operation Combine III" today saw this weird weapon among a display of guided missiles in a hangar. It is known that bombs of this type are being studied at Wright Field, Ohio, and at a West Coast university research laboratory as well as at Elgin.

The Air Force designation of the weapon is VB-6 or "heat-seeking bomb." Technicians explained the bomb "homes in" on any target which radiates more heat than its surroundings.

It was emphasized that the bomb presently is considered still in experimental stages and not yet ready for operational use. However, it was evident that research is well advanced because it was disclosed that the bomb has been test-dropped a number of times.

Apparently the general idea of the bomb has proved workable, but experts explain the need now is for refinements in the action of its heat-seeking feature. They said the gadget must be made more selective.

As an example, they cited an experiment here in which a test was made on the hulk of a wrecked ship on a reef just offshore. Bombardiers thought that heat reflecting from sun-baked decks of the ship, which was in the midst of cool water, would bring the bomb homing in on the ship.

Instead, it steered away from the ship by a wide margin and fell on a sand beach—where the temperature was found to be much hotter than the ship.

Some experimenters think a thermostat gadget is needed so it can be set to match the estimated temperature of the target, thus making it more selective.

The bomb, reposing on a rack in the hangar, has a strange appearance of being alive. In the nose is a single, cyclops-like eye, made of plastic. The eye moves around as the heat source passes across its field of vision.

This electronic-motivated eye is linked by electrical devices to movable tail fins or rudders which steer the bomb in its free fall from a plane.

An observer with a cigarette in his hand found that the eye followed the movement of the cigarette, with rudders acting in unison.

In Britain

Reds Raid Recruiting Rallies

London, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Communist demonstrators tried to break up armed service recruiting rallies in London and Croydon today, but they were dispersed by police and soldiers.

At an outdoor rally in London, police arrested 12 persons including two men who climbed on a platform during a speech by Defense Minister A. V. Alexander. The men carried a banner emblazoned: "No War for Yankee Dollars."

Police at Croydon stopped Communists at the door of the meeting hall and confiscated pamphlets and banners. Some Communists heckled the speakers, Air Marshal Lord Tedder and Colonial Undersecretary Arthur Rees Williams, but they were shouted down and then carried out by soldiers in the audience. The soldiers were applauded by the crowd.

No injuries were reported, although there was a brief clash at the London rally.

While demonstrators scuffled with mounted and foot police, Communists in the crowd passed out leaflets headlined: "Fight for Peace, Not for Wall Street." Others raised banners reading "Peace for Our Children," "Peace, not War" and "Homes Before Bombers."

The crowd, which filled the area in front of Mansion House, dispersed quietly after Alexander ended his plea for recruits for the territorial (national guard) and auxiliary services.

British Fleet Given Alert, Lloyds Says

London, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The authoritative Lloyd's List and Shipping Register reported today that the British Admiralty has sent out a "general alert" regarding fleet preparations for an emergency.

An Admiralty spokesman, however, said Loyd's article only reflected recently announced orders to speed up the recommissioning of some vessels and halting the gradual disposal of ships by sale or scrapping.

Lloyd's naval correspondent said almost all the new weapons developed since the war already are mounted on warships, or could be mounted in the event of an emergency.

"The latest aircraft could be flown off from a suitably equipped modern aircraft carrier, the most recently developed anti-submarine weapons could be operated in our most powerful destroyers, and the newest mines could be laid from fast surface ships, submarines and aircraft," the correspondent said.

The Lloyd's article said it was understood that plans have been made for curtailing the home fleet cruise to the West Indies and South Africa if it becomes necessary.

Lloyd's correspondent estimated, that in an emergency, the Admiralty would be able to muster 5 battleships, 23 fleet aircraft carriers, 32 cruisers, 127 destroyers, 181 frigates, 65 submarines, 65 minesweepers, 36 motor torpedo boats, 3 fast minelayers and 200 other warships. He said the list did not include shops of the British Commonwealth navies which could muster 2 aircraft carriers, 8 cruisers, 26 destroyers, 55 sloops and frigates, 65 minesweepers and 100 other vessels.

Britain Stops Razing Air Raid Shelters

London, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—A British home office spokesman confirmed today reports that work on demolition of Britain's wartime air raid shelters has ceased.

The home office could give no estimate of the extent of shelter demolition to date, but it is understood to be considerable.

Stalin Rebuked By Yugoslav Party Organ

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav Communist organ Borba rebuked Premier Josef Stalin today for siding with the Cominform against Marshal Tito.

Borba, in an unsigned article regarded here as the official view of Yugoslav leaders, said "the right is not on his (Stalin's) side" and that "the attempt to separate party leaders from the people and from the party will fail."

The article, which brought Stalin's name into the Tito-Cominform dispute for the first time, was quick to add: "We declare without any hestitation that Stalin is nowhere so loved and respected outside the USSR as in Yugoslavia."

U. P. Correspondent Ordered to Leave

Belgrade, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The government today ordered Jan Yindrich, United Press staff correspondent, to leave Yugoslavia within 48 hours.

Valizar Savitch, chief of the information department, told Yindrich the expulsion order was issued because of a dispatch which the correspondent wrote last week about a resolution passed by the Yugoslav National Assembly.

No War Threat Now, Belgian Minister Says

Brussels Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Col. Raoul de Fraiteur, Belgian Minister of Defense, said today he believed there was "no immediate danger of a new world war."

De Fraiteur told a news conference that the chances of an accord being reached between East and West "are greater than those of conflict."

Eric Johnston Sees Tito, Ends Yugoslav Ban on U. S. Films

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Oct. 4 (AP).—Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said today he had sold American films to the Yugoslavs.

His announcement came after a two-hour talk with Premier Marshal Tito.

Johnston said the Yugoslavs had agreed to buy from 20 to 25 films during the next year for dollars to be paid in a New York bank. The Yugoslavs also agreed to pay the association a percentage in dollars in the United States.

The agreement reached this afternoon is for one year. Details will be worked out within the next few days.

Johnston said Yugoslavia was the last country in the world which had not been buying American films. He arrived Saturday after a 10-day visit in Moscow, where he talked with Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and sold the Russians a large number of United States films.

Prior to the Moscow agreement, Russia and Yugoslavia were the only countries not importing American films regularly, he said. Russia had not permitted any to come in, while Yugoslavia had shown only a few films, mostly old ones bought occasionally from an individual dealer.

He said he talked "very frankly about every subject" with Tito and then saw representatives of the state-controlled committee in charge of films who, without hesitation, concluded the deal on his terms.

Draft Registrants Take Examinations

The Washington Post

PREINDUCTION TESTS—Three of the nine men who lined up yesterday at the recruiting station at 403 10th st. nw., for examination. Left to right, Ross L. 9 District Men Take Pre-Draft Examinations

Nine nervous Washington men, 1-A draft registrants all, paid the Army a brief visit yesterday that may develop into a 21-month tour of duty for some of them in November.

With the idea in mind that opening induction of 55 District men is no farther off than next month's rent, they stepped up to the Army and Air Force recruiting station here at 8:30 a. m. yesterday for predraft physical and mental examinations.

By midafternoon, shortly after the last chest had been thumped at Fort McNair and X-rays taken at the Pentagon, unofficial and tentative results were disclosed: seven men passed the mental test, five received physical okays, but no figures were available immediately as to how many passed both tests.

Thus did the "third step" of Selective Service (registration and classification are the first two) begin in Washington. For those who passed yesterday, added Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft director, "the next step may well be induction."

District draft officials and Army recruiting officers, perturbed because two men were late in arriving at the station, 403 10th st. nw., changed the time for reporting there to 8:15 a. m. in the future.

To 25-year-old Ross L. Fore, Government correspondence clerk who lives at 1514 26th st. nw. and one of the first 1-A men to show up yesterday, the mental exam was a snap. "Nothing to it," he smiled.

William G. Shingler, jr., 25, of 2015 Kalorama rd. nw., looked at the big, almost empty room at Fort McNair and recalled wartime induction examinations. "This sure is different from the war," he said. "They'd get you up at 4 a. m. and make you stand in line with 500 other guys."

Shingler an insurance adjuster, frankly admitted he hoped he wouldn't be drafted. A part-time law student at George Washington University, he hopes to be able to complete his studies wihtout interruption. He was rejected for physical reasons in World War II, as were the other eight men examined.

The first men to take preinduction mental and physical examinations were:

George H. Barnes, 1863 Kalorama rd. nw., laborer; William G. Shingler, jr., 2015 Kalorama rd. nw., insurance adjuster; George W. Purcell, 2427 I st. nw., construction laborer.

Eugene McGordan, 1227 22d st. nw.; Jesse S. Bowen, 1331 22d st. nw., drug store driver; Ross L. Fore, 1514 26th st. nw., Government correspondence clerk; Robert H. Snead, 107 Wooten ave., Chevy Chase, Md., recreational director, and William M. Mumaw, 2457 Tunlaw rd. nw., grocery store clerk.

Truman Reports

Red Drive To Halt ERP A Failure

President Truman told Congress yesterday the European Recovery Program is making progress despite "every possible effort" by Russia and the Community Party to distort and misrepresent it.

He submitted the first quarterly report on the Economic Cooperation Administration covering the three months ending June 30.

ECA now is in its third quarter and has authorized $2,012,055,851 of its first year appropriation of $5,330,000,000. Mr. Truman said that $1,0?,000,000 in goods and services was authorized during the first quarter to bolster the economy of the 16 western European nations, western Germany, China and Trieste.

His report said an important factor in Europe's industrial progress this year was the improvement in the ability of participating countries to supply themselves with coal and steel.

The report said that through the ECA program, the United States is building up its stockpiles of scarce materials such as manganese, lead, tin, copper, graphite, industrial diamonds, palm oil and cocoanut oil.

Flier Unscathed In War, Hit by Bird Faces Loss of Eye

By The Associated Press

Capt. Theodore Silva, who went unscathed through 58 bombing missions during the war, faces the loss of an eye as a result of being hit by a bird which crashed through the plastic nose of an airplane.

Silva, in Walter Reed Hospital, was hurt Friday night while he was returning to MacDill Airbase, Tampa, Fla., as a passenger in the nose of a B-25 bomber. He had come to Washington for a conference.

Silva is commander of the 367th Squadron of the 306th Bomber Group, a B-29 unit, based at MacDill.

The flier said the plane climbed to 3000 feet after taking off from Bolling Airbase here, leveled off and flew about 15 minutes when something struck him in the face. It was learned later, after the plane had returned to Bolling Airbase, that a bird had smashed through the clear plastic nose of the plane. No one else aboard the plane was injured.

5-Nation Alliance Confirms Montgomery's Command

London (Tuesday), Oct. 5 (AP).—Viscount Montgomery, chief of the imperial general staff, has been appointed military chieftain of the five-nation Western European Military Alliance, it was announced officially tonight.

French General of the Army Jean de Lattre de Tassigny was named commander in chief of the land forces of the alliance.

British Air Marshal Sir James Robb was picked to command the alliance's air forces.

French Vice Admiral Robert Jaujard was named flag officer of the naval forces.

Montgomery's official title will be permanent military chairman of the commanders in chief forming the defense council of the western powers—Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

French Gen. Alphonse Juin, resident general in French Morocco, was reported earlier to have been offered the land forces command but dispatches published here said he declined it.

The appointments were announced in a Foreign Office communique which had been expected for several days.

The chiefs of staffs of the five nations in the alliance will meet in London tomorrow under chairmanship of Lord Tedder, chief of the British air staff.

Montgomery, who commanded British military forces during World War II, is expected to resign at once as chief of the imperial general staff. He will remain a British officer with the understanding he has been loaned to the five-nation command.

Basis for the appointments was the five-nation alliance made in Brussels early this year, providing for military collaboration for defense.

The British Press Association in reporting the appointments said some surprise would be felt over the appointment of a Frenchman as naval chieftain when Britain is the acknowledged naval power among the five allies.

Command Held Most Significant Step

By The Associated Press

United States officials said last night the appointment of a five-nation military command in western Europe is the most significant step yet taken to coordinate Europe's peacetime defenses.

Top officials here said it is one of the key moves necessary before the United States can "associate" itself with a western European defense union.

Experts Differ On Shipping recent publication of the Association of American Ship Owners charges that the United States is the chief target of such discrimination and urges that the State Department employ the "tremendous political and economic influence" of the Nation to give them an even break.

This the State Department refuses to do, holding that they should continue to back "free shipping" rather than engage in bilateral bargaining.

The whole controversy has come to a head as a result of the altered position of the American merchant marine after the war.

Eleven years ago, the United States had an active merchant fleet of about ten million tons. Only one-third of our ships were engaged in foreign commerce, with two-thirds operating on domestic routes. Today our active fleet is about 16½ million tons, most of which is in foreign commerce. Our domestic shipping is less than half what it was before the war, and little prospect is seen of restoring it to prewar level.

America's present expanded foreign fleet results from the dominant position gained during the war and the heavy relief shipments which have been moving from the United States to Europe during the past two years. Both our exports and active foreign fleet now are shrinking rapidly.

Meanwhile, the merchant marines of many of the leading prewar maritime nations have been expanding. Temporarily they have been using excess Liberty ships purchased from the United States and are building modern, efficient craft. There are more ships operating than world trade will support, and foreign vessels can underbid American ships. Our operating costs are much higher.

In light of this situation, State Department officials argue:

We are pouring billions into Western Europe to get those nations on their feet. We hope by strengthening them and forging stronger political ties to contain communism.

Western Europe needs dollars badly. They seek to overcome the dollar shortage by balancing exports and imports. Shipping charges are similar to goods. Where the British use their own ships to transport ECA goods they gain dollars. Where they use American ships they lose dollars.

Why should the United States try to compete with Britain, Holland, Norway and other maritime powers for the highly competitive North Atlantic trade and some other routes, when they can do the job cheaper and better?

These western European powers had the business before the war. America, in attempting to double or triple its foreign trade to make up for the loss of our coastal shipping is "muscling in." Why cut our potential allies' throats to get this business, particularly when the American taxpayer will have to pay subsidies to maintain it? In case of war, the foreign ships will be in service for the common cause.

The above argument is very persuasive and has influenced American policy. It ignores one vital point, however. That is that merchant ships are not merely "goods." They are important elements of national defense. Navy chiefs say we must have an active merchant marine fleet of 11 to 12 million tons as nucleus for expansion in time of war.

If we could depend, without question, on the use of Western Europe's merchant fleets in case of war we could cut our merchant marines sharply. But can we? Most of our defense chiefs say not. They urge that we must insist on something like a 50-50 break on carriage of American exports and imports and a strong, active, modern merchant fleet.

(Tommorrow: Revival of our coastal shipping—a possible alternative.)

Red Probers Order Charges Against Six

By The Associated Press

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) yesterday directed the House Un-American Activities Committee staff to prepare formal perjury and contempt of Congress accusations against "at least six persons."

Thomas said the six persons have figured in the committee's espionage investigations. He said the committee's material will be ready in about a week, listing "at least four for contempt and two for perjury."

He said the cases "immediately thereafter will be referred through proper legal channels to the Justice Department."

Thomas said contempt of Congress citations will be recommended for two witnesses, Steve Nelson and J. Peters, on grounds they refused to answer committee questions in closed-door hearings. Nelson is a Communist Party organizer in Pennsylvania. The committee has called Peters the chief of Communist underground activities in this country. Thomas would not name the other four persons to whom he referred.

Thomas said the committee has completed a preliminary draft of a pamphlet entitled "One Hundred Things You Should Know About Communism in Religion." It discusses, Thomas said, "what would happen to the church if Communism got control of our Government."

Alexander Threatens Libel Action

By the United Press

Robert C. Alexander, State Department officer, yesterday threatened libel action unless the department grants him a public hearing on his disputed charge that subversive aliens entered this country under United Nations protection.

He implied through his attorney that suit would be filed against the three members of a special citizens committee which reported to Secretary George C. Marshall that his story was "irresponsible in its lack of factual support."

The department had arranged a private interview between Alexander and Arch K. Jean, chief of the personnel division, for 2 p. m. today, but Attorney Arthur J. Hilland disclosed he had advised Alexander not to appear.

Army Tells Men Russians Seek to Challenge World

By the United Press

The Army told its troops yesterday that Russia is seeking control of Germany and eventually of all Europe from which she would be in a position to "challenge the world."

In an "armed forces talk" distributed to troops, the Army said the Soviet Union's "obstructionist economy policy" in Germany is "only too evident."

"With possession of Germany's coal and steel production—not to mention the incalculable industrial know-how of the Germans—the Soviet Union, already a strong industrial power in its own right, would be in a position to challenge the world."

22 Nations Hold East, West Must Trade to Prosper

Geneva, Switzerland, Tuesday, Oct. 5 (AP).—A conference of 22 Communist and non-Communist nations decided early today that revival of trade between eastern and western Europe is essential to economic recovery.

It was further decided that this revival can best be brought about by a trade committee within the Economic Commission for Europe (United Nations regional agency, not to be confused with the Economic Cooperative Administration under the Marshall Plan).

The eight-day conference ended after recommending establishment of the trade committee but rejecting a Russian proposal for a parallel committee on industrial development.

Typhoon Slashes Through Okinawa

Tokyo (Tuesday), Oct. 5 (AP).—A violent typhoon slashed through Okinawa yesterday, causing 10 million dollars damage, and is now heading toward populous southern Japan, the United States Army reported today.

There was no mention of casualties on American-held Okinawa. About 55 American families were living in Bucknerville and Awase housing areas, both badly damaged. They are 7 miles apart.

Noncommunist Plot Crushed In South Korea

Seoul, Korea, Oct 4 (AP).—Smashing of a non-Communist plot to overthrow the new South Korean government was announced by the ministry and police today.

Twenty persons were arrested. Home Minister T. Y. Yoon said one was Choi Neung Jin, also known as Daniel Choi, a political rival of the new president, Syngham Rhee. Yoon declined to identify the others or give details, except to say that the group planned to seize power some time after the United Nations considers the Korean question later this month.

Choi was chief of Korean detectives under the American Military Government. In the election that created the present government last May, he was a candidate for the Assembly against Rhee.

The election committee threw his name off the ballot on grounds that his nomination petition contained spurious signatures, and Rhee was etected without opposition.

Police Chief Kim Tai Sun also announced today that the Korea Press one of south Korea's two news agencies, had been closed and eight employes arrested.

Rebels Surrender Warships in Peru

Lima, Peru, Oct. 4 (AP).—Rebel-seized ships of the Peruvian navy entered Callao Harbor today flying white flags of surrender in a dramatic climax to a short-lived but bloody revolution.

The government of President Jose Luis Bustamante Rivero charged the leftist Apra Party with the revolt and rounded up more than 100 members, including leaders in the Parliament.

The revolt was undertaken yesterday by sailors and armed civilians, it centered in Callao, port of Lima, but some clashes occurred also in the capital. The rest of the country was not affected.

With white flags fluttering the 3200-ton cruiser Admiral Grau and frigates Ferre and Palacios were the first to enter Callao Harbor. The destroyer Villar and three submarines followed. Rear Admiral Heriberto Maguina, navy commander, boarded the cruiser and ran up his own insignia. Sailors wounded by attacking Peruvian army planes were taken off.

The exact number of casualties was not learned. The wounded crowded hospitals in Lima and Callao. Fifty were treated at the Lima army hospital alone.

The dead included three army lieutenants and Lieut. Comdr. Juan Revoreda, second in command of naval transport, who was shot in the back when he refused to surrender to the rebellious sailors.

The government said it was launching an exhaustive investigation into the role played by the Apristas, whose party is pledged to social reform and land measures including the division of large estates.

Jews Campaign Against U. N., U. S. Aide Says

Paris, Oct. 4 — (U.P.).—Jews in Jerusalem have started a "deliberate campaign" to discredit the United Nations Palestine Truce Commission and Acting Mediator Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, the U. S. consul-general in Jerusalem charged in a September 30 cablegram to the Security Council made public today.

Consul-General John J. MacDonald, chairman of the truce commission, said the campaign was "obviously undertaken in an effort to destroy public confidence in, and arouse public animosity toward, the two bodies now striving to enforce the truce in Jerusalem." Moreover, MacDonald said, the campaign aims to "bring about the demilitarization of Jerusalem in the state of Israel and is calculated to prove both Jewish determination to keep Jerusalem and the inability of the U. N. to internationalize the city in accordance with Count Bernadotte's recommendations.

MacDonald said the Jews' campaign, "led by Military Governor Dr. Bernard Joseph," was "developing along the lines of attack launched against Count Bernadotte prior to his assassination."

Abdullah Wants to Send Own Envoys to U. N.

Paris, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan, it was learned today, has applied to the United Nations for permission to send his own agents to represent him when the Political Committee of the U. N. General Assembly takes up the Palestine question several weeks from now.

The obvious implication of Abdullah's request was that the Trans-Jordan monarch likes the suggestion in the Bernadotte report that Arab Palestine be linked to Trans-Jordan, and that he does not trust the regular U. N. Arab delegates to push this suggestion in his behalf.

Alexandria Man Feared Drowned On Fishing Trip

Alexandria authorities yesterday asked District harbor police to aid in the search for a 46-year-old man, believed to have drowned on a fishing trip late Sunday.

The missing man was identified as James C. Snoots, 322 S. Washington st., a brother of Alexandria Police Corpl. Wesley Snoots, whose small outboard motorboat was found drifting in a cove south of Alexandria.

Police said Snoots had left his home around 5 a. m. Sunday, and was seen around the Alexandria waterfront several times during the day. His wife became alarmed when he failed to return around 4 p. m., as expected.

Kendall House Being Torn Down

Razing of the century-old Kendall House at 614 E st. nw., occupied by the YWCA for 30 years, was begun yesterday to make way for a parking lot.

The demolition work was begun at noon, after the Club Teen, last of the YWCA-operated services in the building, had been moved to Jefferson Junior High School.

Closing of Kendall House was necessitated by the failure of the last Community Chest program to reach its goal. The social organization transferred one of the four services offered there and canceled two others last spring with the view of disposing of the property.

At that time Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, YWCA president, said the $14,000 annual deficit of Kendall House could no longer be maintained.

"Cost of maintaining the present program and services, plus the necessary renovation and repair of the building, leave us no alternative," she said. The second successive budget slash in as many years, after services were first "cut to the bone," finally required "cutting the bone," she explained.

The move of the Club Teen to its new temporary quarters in the school building at 8th and H sts. sw. was accomplished through the cooperation of the Southwest Recreation Center, Miss Mabel R. Cook, executive director of the YWCA, said.

In March, a low-cost cafeteria which served about 15,000 persons a month and the transient lodging service, used nearly 10,000 times annually, were suspended. The personal counselling service has been moved to the administrative building at 17th and K sts. nw.

The Club Teen, attended by 500 to 600 young folk monthly, provides juke box dancing, refreshments and other entertainment for teen-agers seeking desirable recreation at low cost.

justice and scrupulous fair-play. We will take no less in return. This is the substantially united American position."

Vandenberg termed the Republicans "realists in the presence of the dangers which confront us and the Western world today." He noted that the party's platform demands maintenance of armed services for air, land and sea.

"We shall keep our powder dry," he said. "But it shall never be said of us that we voluntarily abandoned the Council Chamber as the forum of our choice."

Turning to the Eightieth Congress, which President Truman has called the "second worst in history," Vandenberg called attention to the record of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, composed of seven Republicans and six Democrats.

Of the 20 treaties and agreements submitted to the committee by the President, he said, 19 were unanimously approved by a bipartisan vote of 13 to 0. The committee, he continued, also considered 31 bills and resolutions, some of 'transcendant importance." All 31, he noted, received a unanimous 13-to-0 report.

After paying tribute to the House Foreign Affairs Committee for its cooperation, Vandenberg declared:

"When history is written, the Eightieth Congress will be remembered for this record in foreign relations long after other relatively transient issues have been forgotten.

"I suggest that this record makes the Eightieth Congress, in all that relates to our foreign affairs, not 'the second worst in history' as we sometimes hear in general attack, but the best."

Vandenberg credited Republican "initiative" with making far-reached contributions to the U. N. Charter; with improving the European Recovery Program originally submitted to Congress by the State Department; with giving China an active place in the foreign aid program, and with making it possible for the United States to enter "regional arrangements" to stop aggressors, broaden the utility of the U. N. "and to save it from Soviet blight."

The Michigan Senator made it clear, however, that bipartisan foreign policy was not to be interpreted as meaning that the Republicans do not consider themselves free to criticize "past lapses" in foreign policy.

Truman Is Visited By Ickes, Whitney

Rally in Area

Dixiecrats See Hopes For Victory

By The Associated Press

The Thurmond-Wright States Rights ticket will receive a minimum of 100 electoral votes in the November election, a rally of 24 Dixiecrats, meeting at the Odd Fellows Hall in Falls Church, were told last night.

Charles C. Carlin, jr., publisher of the Alexandria Gazette, told the gathering there is a possibility that "neither Truman nor Dewey will get a majority of the electoral votes," because of Dixiecrat strength.

The contest then would be thrown to the House of Representatives, Carlin said, where he felt the States Rights advocate would have the balance of power and put across their candidates.

Furthermore, Carlin said, there is a "better than 50-50 chance that Gov. Strom Thurmond will receive more electoral votes than Truman."

Carlin was one of several speakers last night who defended the South's segregation policies, attacked Truman's civil rights program and extolled the Thurmond-Wright ticket.

Several speakers emphasized that the small size of last night's turnout was not to be considered a reflection on the strength of the Dixiecrat movement.

Carlin's wife, Mrs. Sarah Carlin, Virginia women's chairman for the States Rights Party, said that if the "women of the South get together wa can lick these politicians o fthe North" who would "sell out their grandmothers to get a minority vote."

Presiding at the meeting in place of Frank Burton, jr., State chairman of the party, was W. Thomas Weaver of 1404 N. Roosevelt st., Falls Church.

By The Associated Press

President Truman put patches on a couple of old political feuds yesterday and prepared to hit the road again Wednesday, northward bound. He was described as confident of "great progress" in recent stumping.

Former Secretary of the Interior, Harold L. Ickes, who quit the Truman Cabinet in wrath, paid his first visit to the White House in 2½ years. He came out smiling, said the chat was "entirely friendly" and promised a statement "in good time."

A. F. Whitney, the Railroad Trainmen's chief who once vowed to throw his union's treasury into a fight against Mr. Truman but changed his mind, disclosed plans to campaign for the Democrats across the country.

Aims at Industrial East

After these two parleys, the President plotted two more weeks of grinding train-and-plane campaigning in a huddle with Senator J. Howard McGrath, Democratic chairman. Mr. Truman has been home only two days from a 140-plus speech tour of the West.

The campaign flag will be hoisted over the Presidential special train Wednesday for a thrust into industrial Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and upstate New York.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross promised "a major speech on atomic energy" at the kickoff in Philadelphia on Wednesday night. Major talks also will be made at Jersey City on Thursday and Buffalo on Friday, with lesser speeches sprinkled along the right of way.

Then, after a one-day pause in Washington, Mr. Truman will strike west on Sunday for major or near-major speeches at Akron, Ohio, on October 11 and on the succeeding days at Springfield, Ill., St. Paul, Milwaukee and Indianapolis.

The fortnight's travel will be rounded out with a "nonpolitical" address to the American Legion Convention at Miami on October 18 and two speeches at Raleigh, N. C., on October 19. He will fly both ways this trip.

Later, welcome addresses at Cleveland and Chicago and a swing into the three New England States which, his advisers say, he has a good chance to win—Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. And finally, home to Missouri for the windup.

"The President is in remarkably good physical shape," Ross told reporters. "He feels he has made great progress on his Western trip and is very optimistic."

"Issues" Discussed

When the veteran New Dealer Ickes showed up at the White House for a talk which he requested, reporters told him there was speculation that he plans to "bury the hatchet" with Mr. Truman.

"I never try to stop speculation in the newspapers," Ickes grinned.

He said they talked about "issues, campaign issues—I thought I knew his position but I just wanted to check. Issues are of paramount importance in this campaign."

Otherwise Ickes wouldn't discuss the visit.

Ickes broke with Mr. Truman when the latter chose Edwin W. Pauley, California oil operator and former Democratic National Committee official, to be Undersecretary of the Navy, Ickes testified against Pauley's confirmation. At a news conference later, the President remarked that Ickes could have been wrong.

Ickes instantly resigned in a huff, in February, 1946, and since then has been writing a newspaper column. Mr. Truman withdrew the Pauley nomination.

The Railway Trainmen's president, Whitney, split with Mr. Truman in the summer of 1946. He was aroused by the President's threat to draft railroad workers to avert a Nation-wide railroad stoppage, but resumed friendly relations with the White House last winter.

Tuck Invites Gov. Thurmond To Breakfast

Virginia's Governor Tuck yesterday invited Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States' Rights Democratic presidential candidate, to breakfast Saturday at the mansion in Richmond.

What the Governor of Virginia will say to the Governor of South Carolina remained a mystery, however, as Tuck would not elaborate either on political implications of the visit or on the anticipated topic of discussion.

Governor Tuck merely said he extended the invitation by telephone to Governor and Mrs. Thurmond yesterday. He remained silent on what his position will be in the presidential election.

The meeting of the two Governors at breakfast will follow three speeches scheduled by Governor Thurmond the day before in Richmond.

In Baltimore, Attorney General Hall Hammond filed a demurrer asking the Superior Court to throw out a suit by which Governor Thurmond's supporters hope to get his name on the Maryland ballot in November.

A hearing on the demurrer is set for Wednesday before Judge Joseph Sherbow.

The attorney general reviewed the points of law which prompted his ruling that the name of Governor Thurmond and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, were submitted too late for inclusion on the ballot.

New parties must file petitions before the spring primaries, according to the law. The States' Rights Democrats had not formed their party when the deadline passed.

Party leaders in Maryland, however, have gone ahead with the petition process. They appealed to the courts when the attorney general ruled against them.

Virginia Democrats Plan Truman Backing

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Virginia's "loyal Democrats" and party committeemen have been invited to attend a meeting here Saturday to plan an active campaign for the Truman-Barkley ticket by the "Virginia Straight Democratic Ticket Committee."

The announcement followed by one week a Central State Democratic Committee meeting which declined to endorse a presidential ticket. It merely called for a "full Democratic vote" in November.

Joining in the pro-Truman sentiment yesterday was the State's Attorney General, A. Lindsay Almond, jr., who told a reporter:

"I shall vote for Truman and Barkley and the entire Democratic ticket."

Dewey Gets Report on Foreign Crisis

Albany, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The critical foreign situation claimed the attention today of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate.

He got a preliminary half hour report on the United Nations meeting in Paris by telephone from New York from John Foster Dulles, his chief advisor on foreign affairs, and arranged to get a full dress review tomorrow.

Dewey also arranged to listen to an important discussion of United States foreign policy tonight by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on a nationwide broadcast (CBS 8 p. m. E. S. T.) from Washington.

Dulles Flies Back

Dulles, a delegate to the United Nations Assembly in Paris and Dewey's likely choice for Secretary of State, flew back from Europe to make a special report to the GOP candidate.

Dewey's office then announced that Dulles would come to Albany tomorrow morning and spend the entire day with the Governor at the mansion.

Dulles will fly back to the Paris Conference as soon as his report to Dewey has been delivered.

Next Campaign Swing

While Dewey was concerning himself with the foreign situation his political aides were working on the itinerary for his next campaign swing.

Tentative plans call for him to begin a one-week swing starting with a major speech in Pittsburgh Monday night and winding up with an eight-appearance barnstorming tour of Minnesota on Friday.

Between those dates he may visit Kentucky, Tennessee and Oklahoma. There are important Senate contests in each of those States, as well as in Minnesota, and Dewey is determined to give all assistance to the GOP candidates.

Wallace Airs Farming Views

Fresno, Calif., Oct. 4 (AP).—Henry Wallace, in what was tabbed as one of the main farm speeches of his campaign for the Presidency, accused the Democrats and Republicans tonight of "sniping away" at the farm program developed under President Roosevelt.

In his address, prepared for delivery at the Memorial Auditorium in this agricultural center, Wallace demanded Federal price supports for raisins and other speciaity crops.

He repeated his criticism of California's Gov. Earl Warren, the Republican candidate for Vice President.

Wallace said when President Truman was in California he described Warren as "almost a Democrat."

"I put it up to you," said Wallace. "Warren may be a Democrat under Truman's definition. But Roosevelt would never have called him one."

The Progressive Party candidate said Roosevelt and the New Deal, not Truman or Republican Candidate Thomas E. Dewey, first approved Federal financing for the Central Valley project, which will bring more irrigation water to this region.

And he said of Governor Warren: "The record shows that when he was Attorney General of California and a member of the State water project authority he voted against Central Valley measures."

Wallace spoke with pride of the farm program which he claimed was developed when he was Secretary of Agriculture under Roosevelt.

Utmost Production Urged by Warren

Pittsburgh, Oct. 4 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren declared tonight that only by "all-out production equal to our every need" can the United States lick inflation and at the same time, arm itself against the threat of aggression from abroad.

The Republican vice presidential candidate reached this steel-producing center following a day in which some of the largest crowds of his campaign turned out to meet his special train as it cut westward across Pennsylvania.

Speaking tonight at a Republican rally in Syria Mosque, Warren said that "only the United States can be either productive, strong or free."

Without production, Warren said, "prices will tend to climb, the dollars of the American workmen will buy less and less, and we will move toward the strange situation of full employment, high wages on the one hand, and a lower standard of living on the other."

Warren defined the cause of the inflationary cycle as simply a case of demand outstripping supply despite "miracles of production."

"Thus," he said, "the cause of this inflation is deeply imbedded and widespread.

"It cannot be reached with paper rules and regulations.

"It can be reached only with machines, bulldozers, steam-shovels, plows, rails, plus organized energy and know-how.

"By this I mean nothing more or less than an all-out production equal to our every need."

Rolling across Pennsylvania during the day, Warren made a series of platform talks the occasion to lay the blame for Communist "infiltration" squarely on the Administration.

Hyattsville To Finish Auto Meter Work

Hyattsville City Council last night ordered the installation of parking meters in the city's business section completed Thursday and Friday.

Meter heads will be connected to some 160 posts already in place, but the meters will not go into operation until the Council issues an ordinance regulating their operation.

City Attorney Nicholas Orem was directed by the Council to prepare regulations for operation. His draft will be considered by the Council at its next session or at a special meeting.

Some 40 meters for West Hyattsville will not be installed, pending disposition of an injunction granted Queens Chapel Shopping Center. It maintained sidewalks in front of the center are private property.

An injunction, obtained by a group of Hyattsville merchants, had restrained the council from completing erection of the meters in the business section.

This injunction, however, was dissolved last Wednesday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

In other actions, the Council:

Gave owners of the 214-unit Hamilton Manor Apartments, Queens Chapel rd. and Hamilton st., six months to comply with fire regulations requiring a fire alarm system with bells on every floor.

Decided to take no further action to buttress its July 23 order requiring some 40 persons to evacuate the Hyatt Mansion, now a rooming house, on grounds it is unsafe for occupancy.

Remember '32, Sen. Barkley Tells Iowans

Mason City, Iowa, Oct. 4 (AP).—Senator Alben W. Barkley carried his Democratic vice presidential campaign into the heart of the Nation's breadbasket today and urged Iowans to remember "the poverty and despair of 1932."

The Kentuckian told a northern Iowa crowd of 2000 that the Democratic Party "halted that decline" in farm income which he said caused foreclosures of homes and farms 16 years ago.

Under Democratic administrations, Barkley said, national farm income has risen from $5,000,000,000 in 1932 to $30,000,000,000 today.

He said that by limiting the authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation to acquire storage space, the Republican-controlled 80th Congress has caused grain producers in this area to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars by being forced to sell grain "at distress prices."

Barkley strongly urged the election of Democrat Guy Gillette, who is seeking to regain his Senate seat in a race against George Wilson, Republican incumbent.

Earlier, at a news conference, Barkley denied an assertion of Representative Andresen (R., Minn.) last night. Andresen had contended U. S. grain exports the past two years were "the controlling factor which caused scarcity and higher prices for grains and livestock."

Barkley said this statement indicated a fundamental isolationist Republican attitude toward the European Recovery Program.

Progressives Listed On Arkansas Ballot

Atlanta, Oct. 4 (AP).—Secretary of State C. G. Hall of Arkansas announced today that electors of the Progressive Party would be allowed on the Arkansas general election ballot in November.

Hall, en route to a national convention of secretaries of state at Charleston, S. C., said, however, that he would check "the petition and the accompanying affidavit of the party officers which states the party is not affiliated either directly or indirectly with the Communist Party."

3 Members of Cochran Family Can Practice in High Court

The Washington Post

IN HIGHEST COURT—Howe P. Cochran, member of the bar of the United States Supreme Court, and of the Washington and New York bars, with his wife (left), and daughter, Mrs. Betty C. Stockvis, both of whom were admitted yesterday to the bar of the Supreme Court. Mrs. Cochran is better known professionally as Margaret F. Luers

Practice before the Supreme Court became a family affair yesterday.

Howe P. Cochran, Washington lawyer, presented his wife, Margaret Luers Cochran, 36, and her step-daughter, Betty Cochran Stockvis, 34, to the justice for admission to practice before the Supreme Court. The formal presentation is permissible after three years actual practice in the highest court in their district, which here is the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. Cochran was admitted to the Supreme Court bar in 1935.

The three lawyers began to work as a team in 1937 when Mrs. Cochran, then Miss Luers, came to work in Cochran's office after receiving her law degree from George Washington University. They were married in 1945.

His daughter, Betty, said Cochran, "took to law in self defense after having it with every meal." She attended National University School of Law here and joined the family firm as a certified lawyer in 1942.

The three work as a firm doing the same legal work, representing corporations and individuals in Federal tax suits against the Government and they share a common office at 132 3d st. se.

Cochran, in addition to his law duties, has written several treatises on Federal tax practice and procedure, and has lectured before the American Law Institute in Philadelphia. He received his law degree from the National University School of Law in 1930.

The Cochrans live at 101 Carroll st. se., and Mrs. Stockvis lives at 209 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, Va.

trict attorney related, Clark also was spending from $8000 to $10,000 on automobiles, $1000 a year on theaters, gave his wife $2000 monthly for household expenditures, and paid $4500 annual rent for his seven-room East 77th st. apartment.

Clark also maintained a home on Lake Champlain and had $140,000 in life insurance, the district attorney said.

Clark, Hogan added, "led his wife, family and friends to believe he had a lucrative law practice which yielded him from $50,000 to $75,000 per year while he actually never made any more than from $3000 to 5000."

The accused lawyer, Hogan said, also invested "at least" $100,000 in highly speculative businesses, including $20,000 in a hair-restoring venture suggested by a barber who said he possessed an ancient family herb treatment.

As a result of the lawyer's suicide attempt, Hogan said, Clark was taken first to the Maine General Hospital in Portland. Later he was committed to a White Plains, N. Y., hospital on a Supreme Court commitment obtained by his wife, Mrs. Janet Harris Clark.

Hey KIDS!

Can you write a RADIO SLOGAN?

It's The Washington Post's "SAINT MYSTERY COMIC" SLOGAN CONTEST

Open to all grade school, junior high, and high school kids in the Washington area

You've heard the Lucky Strike auctioneer. You've listened to the Pepsi-Cola jingle. You know that Whiz candy bar slogan. And don't forget the whispered Smith, that you don't make a move without calling. Singing commercials—you're up to your ears in them.

Now it's your turn! Try your hand at writing a catchy radio slogan for the new "Saint" mystery comic strip that's just getting started in The Washington Post. If you submit one of the 10 best slogans, you'll get $10 to show you're in the money. And you'll get a chance to step up to a microphone and sing, chant, yell, whisper or recite your slogan over the air. The one who does it best gets his (or her) $10 bill turned into $100. A record will be made of his slogan and he'll be hearing it on Washington radio stations, as part of The Post's promotion on the "Saint" comic strip.

HERE'S WHAT YOU DO:

First, begin by turning to the comic pages of The Post and get acquainted with "The Saint." He's the famous mystery story character made so popular in the Leslie Charteris books, and he's been in a radio serial and had movies made about him. Now he's in the new Washington Post comic strip. Get acquainted with him there.

Next, decide what you want to say about this new mystery comic. Then say it—in a slogan, a jingle, what have you. With or without sound effects indicated—it doesn't matter.

Finally, write your slogan on a piece of paper, put on your name, address, age and school, and send it to the "Saint Mystery Comic" Contest Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. You may enter as many slogan ideas as you wish. Be sure your name and address are on each one.

The contest starts right now and lasts until October 31. Entries received after October 31 will not even be opened. So get going—now. Read the Saint comic in The Washington Post. Put on your thinking cap. Try your idea out on your family. Then send it in. In case two or more persons send in the same slogan, the one reaching the judges first will be considered to be the original, so it pays to get your ideas in right away.

Here's your chance to WIN up to $100 And be on the RADIO yourself, besides!

IT'S EASY TO WRITE A WINNING SLOGAN OR JINGLE — HERE'S HOW!

Remember that radio slogan about another comic strip character? "It's a bird! It's a plane! It's S-u-p-e-r-man!" What's hard about that one? You can think up another equally simple, equally effective for "The Saint." Or maybe a jingle would be more along your line. Here's an example:

(Man's voice) The Saint is a pain to the cops.
(Girl's voice) They grab him, but then off he pops.
(Man) He goes after crime,
(Girl) And wins every time.
(Together) So Post readers think he is tops.
(Close harmony) You'll see him in the c-o-m-i-c-s . . .

Easy? Sure! Didn't take two minutes. Corny? You bet! You can do lots better. And win $10—maybe $100. Let's go!

High Court Asked to Settle Senate Fight in Texas

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The United States Supreme Court, opening its 159th year yesterday was asked to intervene in the Texas senatorial fight and to decide whether Congress can ask a witness if he is a Communist.

Former Gov. Coke R. Stevenson of Texas asked the full court to set aside an order issued last week by Justice Hugo Black nullifying a lower court injunction which would have removed the name of Representative Lyndon B. Johnson, Stevenson's opponent, from the ballot. Black's order had the effect of insuring Johnson's election to the Senate.

Johnson's attorney at the same time asked the full court to affirm Black's ruling. His petition, filed by Abe Fortas, expressed "no doubt" that Black had authority to issue the order but held it "advisable" to give he court "a basis upon which it may act independently" if it chose.

Last month Johnson defeated Stevenson in a hotly-fought Democratic primary by 87 votes and the party's executive committee declared him the winner. But Stevenson went before Federal District Judge T. Whitfield Davidson, charged fraud, and obtained an order restraining Texas election officials from placing Johnson's name on the ballot. Johnson promptly asked Justice Black, who has charge of the Federal judicial circuit which includes Texas, to stay the injunction. This Black did last Tuesday, on the basis that the "universal rule" had been that a court could interfere with an election only when authorized by a plain statute.

"It would be a drastic break with the past," he went on, "to permit a Federal judge and the Federal courts to go into the business of conducting a contest over elections held in a State.

"I think it is impossible to interpret present statutes that Federal courts may go into a State and suspend its process of electing a Senator or a Governor. There is no statutory justification for a Federal court enjoining the steps of an election.

Stevenson's attorneys, in their brief filed yesterday, maintained that a single justice was without jurisdiction to nullify an injunction of a Federal district court. They asked the full court to "restore the status existing at the time the stay order was made."

Chief Justice Vinson indicated without comment that the motions would be received. It was not known when the Court would act, though it was naot expected to do so before next Monday.

Should Black's action be confirmed, Johnson would be elected, since the Democratic nominee in Texas is virtually assured of success in a general election. Should the full Court disagree with Black, the ballot would carry no Democratic nominee for Senator, since the time for submission of nominees under Texas law has expired.

In the second case, John Howard Lawson, a Hollywood movie writer convicted of contempt of Congress for refusing to tell a House committee if he was or was not a Communist, asked the Court to set the verdict aside as unconstitutional. He was sentenced to one year in jail and fined $1000 and is now under bond awaiting the outcome of his appeal.

In going directly to the Supreme Court, Lawson sought a quick decision on his contention that the committee violated his rights under the First, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth and Tenth Amendments to the Constitution. He already has appealed to the United States Court of Appeals here, but told the Supreme Court the question at issue was of such importance it should not wait for the lower court to hand down a decision.

The outcome of Lawson's direct appeal to the Supreme Court no doubt would affect the cases of nine other motion picture writers and directors who also were indicted for refusing to answer the same question.

UMW to Consider Indorsement in Presidential Race

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—John L. Lewis said tonight that the United Mine Workers fortieth convention opening here tomorrow will pass "on the whole subject" of a political endorsement in the presidential campaign.

He refused to indicate what position he might take in his opening address.

Asked whether he will announce his retirement from the union presidency, Lewis replied, "I never comment on rumors." He said that the convention will take up a shorter work week and other 1949-50 wage contract demands, Federal enforcement of mine safety, and union policy under the Taft-Hartley Law.

One of the new contract goals reportedly ready for proposal to the convention is a six-hour day.

New Areas to Get Gas

The Washington Post

PIPELINE—A 16-inch line to carry natural gas from the main pipe at Dranesville, Va., to Arlington County, is nearing completion. Here it is being set into a trench on Lee blvd., east of Seven Corners, Va.

A new 16-inch pipeline to link nearby Virginia points more directly to natural gas supplies should be completed by the end of the month, H. B. Noyes, general superintendent of Washington Gas Light Co., said yesterday.

The new line, by tying into the cross-country gas main near Dranesville in Fairfax County, will permit the Virginia points to receive natural gas directly from the sources in Kentucky and West Virginia, instead of via Washington as at present.

Beginning at Dranesville, the main will run south along the Leesburg Pike, through Falls Church to Seven Corners, then east along Lee blvd. to Arlington.

Here it will tie in with mains of the Rosslyn Gas Co., which now supplies Arlington and some Fairfax areas. The Rosslyn company is a subsidiary of the Washington Gas Light Co.

At present, Arlington receives its gas from the District through a line across Key Bridge.

Montgomery Bar Approves Probe Of Law Library

The Montgomery County Bar Association yesterday approved an investigation of the law library in the county courthouse, Rockville.

In other action at yesterday's meeting, the executive committee decided to study amendments to application forms in order to obtain more information on prospective members. A proposal to reconsider the schedule of suggested minimum fees of attorneys for revision was tabled.

The meeting, a luncheon, was held at the Hungerford Tavern, Rockville.

✓ SOUR FOOD TASTE
✓ ACID INDIGESTION

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief from this nervous distress.
Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.
To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.
Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.
Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Annual D. C. Report Terms Garage, Shop Need 'Urgent'

"Urgent" need for a new garage and shop to house the District government's automotive fleet was emphasized in an annual District report made public yesterday.

Stopped cold by the District Commissioners' demand for economy budgets this year, the Central Garage and Shops Department is not asking that money immediately be appropriated for the new building. Instead, the construction is requested "as soon as possible when funds are available."

The Central Garage and Shops now are housed in the old Ford Building at 210 John Marshall pl. nw. Because of overflow demands for use of the space, 32 additional spaces in the new Municipal Center Building parking basement are used by the garage.

During the last fiscal year, the local government owned 1206 pieces of automotive equipment, not including police scout cars and patrols, and fire department equipment.

Work of the garage is hampered at present by the fact that two freight elevators used to take cars to the fourth and fifth floors of the garage are outmoded and are not long enough to accommodate the long-wheel-based car models now being manufactured.

The elevators cannot be expanded because such work would interfere with floor supports, it was stressed.

C-74 Carries 20-Ton Load Across Atlantic

A giant Douglas C-74 Globemaster, carrying 20 tons of freight, flew the Atlantic yesterday in its first weekly round-trip flight to support the Berlin airlift.

Its load of 16 spare aircraft engines and other cargo was twice the tonnage carried by the Douglas C-54 which now is the workhorse and mainstay of the trans-Atlantic supply run.

Lack of Shoes Keeps Pupils From School

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 4 (b.—Lack of shoes has been keeping some Anne Arundel County children out of school, Mrs. Eleanor Waring of the county board of education said today.

"We had more than 500 children who missed at least 40 days of school last year," she said. "Lack of clothing was the main cause of absence."

At least seven children who have been provided with shoes by public-spirited citizens are now back in school.

When the thin-soled shoes of some children now in school wear out, they, too, will drop out because they are unable to buy new ones, Mrs. Waring said.

A National Airport soldier, who reportedly returned to his barracks with bloodied clothing the weekend of the Mahlan-Kline murder, will be questioned by Anne Arundel (Md.) County police "sometime later in the week," it was said yesterday.

Police said the soldier was being held by military authorities at Gravelly Point, where he is assigned to the Military Air Transport Service. Chief John H. Souers and an assistant visited the air base over the weekend to check the story.

What their investigation revealed, if anything, would would not divulge.

Another possible clue in the mystery slaying of the 25-year-old postal clerk, John H. Mahlan, and his 18-year-old companion, Mary C. Kline, now seems irrelevant, police indicated yesterday.

An abandoned automobile, identified as one reported stolen during the summer, was found by two hunters along Harold Harbor rd.

Mental Check Given Evins

Arlington Circuit Court yesterday ordered Herman D. Evins, 32, charged with the shooting of his wife and baby boy, sent to Southwestern State Hospital in Marion, Va., for mental observation.

His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Evins, 23, and their year-old son, Robert, were wounded May 12 at the home of Mrs. Evins' parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Winston, of 4100 N. 37th st., Arlington.

Evins told police, after signing a statement, that the shooting was the result of "in-law trouble" at the home. His attorney, Frank L. Ball, yesterday indicated he would plead temporary insanity as a defense.

Defense Need Cited In St. Lawrence Power Project Plea

Gen. Francis B. Wilby, chairman of the New York State Power Authority, said yesterday the proposed St. Lawrence River power project is needed urgently as a defense measure by both Canada and the United States.

He testified before the Federal Power Commission as it opened hearing on the $463,474,000 development.

Wilby recalled that the proposal is supported by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to help Ontario, New York and surrounding States overcome power shortages.

The project is opposed by railroads and coal interests, which have formed the National St. Lawrence Project Conference.

William Howe, counsel for the conference, told the commission today that it has no authority to approve the project without an act of Congress.

Truck Driver Held For Jury in Assault

Fred Nixon, 29, a truckdriver, of 1113 B st. se., was ordered held for the grand jury yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to rape a 32-year-old waitress.

Bond was fixed at $1000 by Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court after the alleged victim, Mrs. Susan Viola Gibson, 32, of 913 Massachusetts ave. nw., admitted she was "drunk" when she gave police a statement of her charges. She had told them she was assaulted early Saturday.

When arrested, Nixon had Mrs. Gibson's handkerchief and cigarette case in his pocket.

When Police Detective Michael J. Apperti testified that Mrs. Gibson smelled of alcohol when he spoke to her but that she was completely coherent, Judge Scott replied:

"To me it's amazing that officers would take a statement from a woman who was under the influence of alcohol."

Inquests Scheduled Today Into Traffic, Fight Deaths

A coroner's inquest will be held at 11:30 a. m. today in the traffic death of Edward S. Walls, 76, of 223 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Mr. Walls

Walls, a House of Representatives doorman, was killed Sunday night when he was struck at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., by a streetcar, operated by Leon D. Richeson, 27, of 2123 st. nw. His was the District's 52d traffic fatality this year.

A second inquest into the death of Lewis W. Edwards, 58, of 1531 Wisconsin ave. nw., is scheduled for noon. Edwards died Sunday at Gallinger Hospital of head injuries, received during an altercation in Bells ct. nw., early Saturday. Police said he stabbed Grafton Lyles and Winfield Lyles, of 1526 Bells ct. nw., and that they, in turn, threw him out the door. His head struck a manhole cover, according to police.

Incinerator Contract in Court

A construction company, awarded the contract to build an Arlington incinerator, failed to meet building specifications "in four separate instances," it was charged yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court.

The statement came during the first day of a hearing to determine whether or not the court should set aside the contract awarded by the Arlington County Board to the Nichols Engineering & Research Corp. of New York.

The court action was asked by the losing bidder, the Morse Boulger Destructor Co. of New York, and six Arlington citizens

Representing the Morse Boulger Co., Attorney Oren Lewis said yesterday his client's bid was nearly $18,000 less than the $646,575 bid by the Nichols firm. He added that Nichols was 12 per cent below incinerator specifications on one phase of its bid.

Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker, representing the Arlington County Board, told the court that the county would save $33,900 over the next 10 years by taking the Nichols contract because operating costs of the Morse Boulger plant would be higher.

Westward Trek

It is nearly a century since Horace Greeley advised young men to "Go west and grow up with the country," but his advice, according to the latest report from the Census Bureau, is still being heeded. More now, in fact, than ever before. Provisional estimates of the population as of last April 1 show the States of the Far West leading all others in percentage growth since the last official census. Oregon has gained 49.2 per cent, California 45.2 per cent, and Washington 43.3 per cent since 1940. The average for all the United States has been 11 per cent for the same period. In the District of Columbia, incidentally, the jump over 1940 comes to the very respectable figure of 35.5 per cent.

Elsewhere over the Nation lesser increases appear in most States, with the Southern States generally showing the least growth. Florida and Texas are exceptions. Seven States, on the contrary, have lost population, most of them in the north central region. Montana has 8.6 per cent fewer inhabitants than in 1940 and North Dakota has lost 12.8 per cent of its population. Mississippi, Arkansas and Kentucky are also losers. These, it will be noticed, are primarily agricultural States and their decline reflects the previously observed flight from the farm. A year ago, for example, the census report showed that, while urban population had grown 12.7 per cent since 1940, rural nonfarm had increased even more, but farm population had dropped 9.6 per cent.

The real significance of these figures shows up in the consistent and sometimes phenomenal growth of those States where new industries have taken root during and since the war. Besides the three Pacific Coast States, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Texas have all grown faster than the country as a whole. So, of course, have such already industrialized States as Michigan, Connecticut, Indiana, New Jersey, Ohio and Delaware. But in sheer numbers, no other State comes close to the more than three million increase in California.

Nothing could more clearly emphasize the fact of industrial decentralization or dispersal in the United States. The Northeastern section of the Nation is still the most heavily industrialized, of course. But no longer does it have anything like a monopoly.

Economic Union

Fifteen months from now France and Italy will be joined in a customs union if a prediction made in Rome the other day comes true. The joint Italo-French Economic Committee which has been studying the problem has concluded that the marriage can take place by January 1, 1950. Though many of the thorniest details remain to be worked out and the two governments must still approve the arrangement, Umberto Grazzi, Italian Director General of Economic Affairs, felt confident enough of the result to say flatly that it would come about. This is heartening news, but ought to be taken with a large reservation. Plans are not accomplishments and, as the Benelux countries have found out, putting a customs union into effect is not a simple assignment.

Like the Benelux customs union that went into operation a year ago, the contemplated Italo-French arrangement is expected to be the first step toward full economic union. In the case of Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxemburg, the common tariff schedule against imports from other countries, with pooling of customs revenues, is to be followed in due time by elimination of barriers among the three partners themselves, coordination of internal taxation, an integrated monetary system, and the like. The further steps in Franco-Italian unification have not yet been spelled out, but they will have to follow somewhat the same pattern. For it is the nature of a customs union that the very obstacles to its successful achievement also become propellents to still wider unification.

The difficulty of compromising differing import restrictions into a common tariff schedule is only the initial problem. It is not made easier by the fact that in recent years customs duties, levied in cash, have been reinforced by quotas, blocked accounts, and various other methods of limiting imports. The solution of these issues immediately raises other and very far-reaching questions. Uniform customs duties mean very little if the participating nations apply widely different internal excise or sales taxes, manipulate their currencies for competitive advantage, or adopt divergent policies for achieving full employment and a balanced economy.

A League of Nations study completed in 1946 and published by the United Nations follows the logic of the situation to its clear conclusion:

> When there is free movement of goods, persons and capital in any area, diverse economic policies concerned with maintaining economic activity cannot be pursued. To assure uniformity of economic policy some political mechanism is required. The greater the interference of the state in economic life, the greater must be the political integration within a customs union.

On this premise, the extensive state activity in the economies of both France and Italy should rapidly lead them from the first step of customs union toward the final step of political union. It would do the same for all the members of the OEEC, which is one reason for hoping that the study group on a customs union of all the Marshall Plan nations will soon get beyond the talk stage.

Electoral Shenanigans

Georgia's response to the demand for a free expression of the public will in the presidential election ought to set many citizens to thinking seriously about our outmoded electoral machinery. Called into special session by Governor Thompson, the Georgia Legislature refused to require that the candidates for elector in that State be pledged to any presidential candidate. It is said that the Democratic executive committee will name electors favorable to President Truman. But the situation is such that many voters will doubtless have to cast their ballots without knowing for whom they are likely to be counted.

Over in Louisiana the Legislature voted to permit the names of President Truman and his running mate on the ballot, but they cannot be officially identified as Democrats. It is true, of course, that they are not the choice of the Democratic organization in Louisiana but thousands of voters will regard them as the regular Democratic candidates. The fact that they cannot be so listed is certain to lead to confusion and might result in frustration of the public will. The only favorable aspect of the situation is that it brings starkly to public attention the obsolescence of our century-and-a-half-old electoral system.

Senator Lodge is sponsoring an admirable amendment to the Constitution that would have the effect of abolishing the office of elector and dividing the electoral votes of the States among the presidential candidates in proportion to the popular vote cast for each candidate. That reform is long overdue. The shenanigans of some of the Southern States this year raise a question, however, as to whether it goes far enough. The electoral system we now have is based on the eighteenth-century idea that each of the States would name its outstanding statesmen to join with similar statesmen from other States in selecting the President. Actually the President has been chosen by the people since the days of Andrew Jackson, but the machinery that we continue to use is that left over from the era when the people were not trusted to choose their own President.

By eliminating the dummy electors who stand between the people and the Presidency Senator Lodge's amendment would go a long way toward preventing political manipulations in presidential elections. Still, it would leave the electoral machinery entirely in the hands of the States. Presumably a disgruntled State Legislature could continue to vote the candidates of either of the national parties off the ballot. The operation of our national election machinery would still be at the mercy of 48 different law-making bodies having no national responsibility. We do not think the filling of the great office of President should hang by such slender threads.

The present issue is not, of course, whether Democratic votes in the South shall be cast for Mr. Truman. Rather, it is whether the people shall have a chance to make their wishes known through the ballot box. Perhaps it will be necessary to give Congress authority to require that the names of the candidates of the major parties be printed on the ballots of every State, under the party designation. That would not prevent the rise of splinter parties. But it would prevent local politicians in control of State machinery from denying a free expression of the public will.

The real question is whether the Nation should control its own electoral machinery in this vital operation of choosing a President. This country is no longer a mere aggregation of States held together by tenuous bonds. Having become a great Federal Nation, which is now playing a leading role in world affairs, the United States ought to leave open no chance that the fair election of its Chief Executive might be fouled up by a State Legislature playing politics with election statutes.

Peron's Plotters

President Juan Domingo Peron has refueled his xenophobia by the on-again-off-again ban on five foreign correspondents in Argentina. It has been said that Peron's hatred of Americans amounts almost to an obsession. It is hardly coincidental, then, that four of the correspondents whose credentials were revoked and then inexplicably restored happen to be Americans, just as it was natural that the alleged ringleader of the "plot" against Peron disclosed the other day should also be an American. Of course, no Argentine would think of opposing or disputing the word of a President whose magnanimity has been so widely demonstrated!

Senor Peron evidently has profited well by the experience of the Reichstag fire which Hitler found so handy. The stage has been amply set for discriminatory action against United States correspondents by Peron's repeated reference to them as "spies." Undoubtedly the present tales of "conspiracy" are intended to educate public opinion to favor the law which will permit Peron to succeed himself in office. For although the jury is stacked, Peron, in company with most dictators, is anxious to retain a semblance of legal sanction. If by using them as whipping boys Peron hopes to intimidate the correspondents in their reporting, however, he has a lot to learn about American journalism. What he is doing in actuality is proving to the world that under his leadership Argentina is assuming more and more of the aspects of a police state.

Moscow's Weak Case

The great significance of the debate which began yesterday before the Security Council is that the Berlin dispute is now out in the open where all the world will judge the rights and the wrongs of the respective national claims. The Soviet Union's Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr. Vishinsky, argued against inclusion of the British-French-American complaint on the Council's agenda by saying: "Gentlemen, you have got the wrong address." But the argument he made suggested the opposite. Its effect was to emphasize the fact that, for the first time since the blockade of Berlin was instituted last June, Moscow is on the defensive.

The Russians' response to the British-French-American charge that Russia has threatened the peace by its actions in Berlin is a countercharge against the three Western powers. By instituting a separate currency in western Germany and preparing to set up there a separate government, Russia says, the United States, Britain and France destroyed the system of quadripartite administration of both Germany and Berlin and thereby undermined the legal basis of their participation in the administration in Berlin. If this were true, Moscow would have a good case against the Western powers that might be carried to the World Court. Russia is as much pledged to seek the peaceful settlement of international disputes as are other members of the United Nations. Why did she not exhaust the peaceful means of redress instead of resorting to the coercive tactics of the blockade? Here is the nub of the whole dispute. The Russians were not willing to confine their actions to peaceful negotiation or an appeal to any U. N. body, but attempted to starve 2,500,000 Germans as a means of forcing their will upon their former allies.

The Kremlin is right in saying that the Berlin dispute is only one phase of the larger controversy over the future of Germany. On that ground it wishes to toss the whole problem back into the lap of the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers. The council would doubtless be a better instrument to handle the controversy, fruitless though its efforts have been in the past, if it were not for the force that is being applied in Berlin. It is this resort by the Kremlin to a dangerous weapon that has made the dispute a threat to the peace. We do not see how the dispute can be taken out of the hands of the U. N. until that threat has been removed. But of course the Russians could remove it in five minutes by lifting the blockade. By doing so they would leave the Security Council nothing to talk about, and the process of seeking agreement could once more go forward. Even Moscow ought to realize, however, that free men prefer the police to a forum when a club is held over their head. In this instance the Security Council represents the police in spite of its weakness in either reaching or carrying out a decision.

Cause Or Effect?

There is nothing exactly earth-shaking about the conclusion of the House select committee that Government purchases of grain for export have been a primary cause of high grain prices. Certainly they have been. But the report's implied castigation of governmental policy on this account is pretty much a case of tilting at windmills. For there was no realistic alternative but to send food abroad if the American moral responsibility to a hungry world was to be fulfilled and, indeed, if our interest in the restoration of a stable world economy was to be protected. As the minority report emphasizes, the position taken by the majority "ignores the probable cost to the Nation if the supplies had not been sent abroad."

Very little of a constructive nature is likely to result, it seems to us, from such excursions into the realm of who-struck-John. For just as the majority is unassailably right in asserting that buying for export has been a major factor in the price rise, so the minority also has a point in citing the removal of price controls and the poor corn crop last year as contributory influences. The truth is that a great many things have had a bearing on high grain prices and high food prices generally. Any attempt to single out one cause runs the risk of oversimplification. Possibly this exercise may serve to replenish the reservoirs of political ammunition, but it contributes little to straight thinking on how to deal with the inflated price structure that exists.

In showing the effect on the grain market of abrupt governmental purchases, the committee has performed a more useful service. While the over-all inflationary effect of such purchases probably is unavoidable, undoubtedly some of the opportunity for speculatory gains could be eliminated by spreading the buying out over longer periods. As for the charges that speculators profited from inside information, however, the report does an effective job of debunking. It cites one instance in which a leak on contemplated Government lard purchases did aid lard dealers, but it states categorically that "the committee has not been able to prove" that any grain speculators received advance information from governmental sources. In view of the widely publicized accusations by Harold Stassen last winter—accusations which gave rise to the investigation itself—one wonders what all the shouting was about.

"Fact Or Libel?"

In the September 30 Washington Post an editorial refers to the action recently filed in the United States District Court in Baltimore by Alger Hiss against Whitaker Chambers. It seems from statements therein made and in former editorials that Mr. Hiss had unduly delayed such action after vicious slander on his integrity as a member of the American Bar and his loyalty as a citizen of the United States had been broadcast nationally in the press and over the radio for several weeks at least.

It is not believed, however, that many members of the bar will consider it delay where it has been necessary to avoid a serious question as to the jurisdiction of the United States district. Such is the first question to determine and it is wholly aside from the question as to the cause of action for slander, or the evidence thereof.

It may not be out of place to make a few comments as to the evidence made public at the hearings before the Un-American Activities Committee of the House and elsewhere given to the press. The judgment and conclusions of any committee which functions both as a judicial and as a prosecuting agency, no matter how distinguished may be its members, will, when subjected to calm analysis by any intelligent citizen, fall far short of being convincing and in any court of law such a judgment or conclusion would not even be admissible, or otherwise merit consideration.

Gandhi's Example

While the peacetime draft in the United States progresses and we strengthen our reliance on military power, on October 2 in cities and villages throughout the world men and women, dedicated to the positive principles of love and nonviolence in human affairs, gathered in commemoration of the birth of one of the greatest spiritual leaders of all time—Mahatma Gandhi.

Gandhi devoted his life to the power of the spirit and the creative forces of love. He spent all his energies developing techniques of nonviolence. He demonstrated that the "spiritual" is the "practical". Largely as a result of his vigorous campaigns of nonviolence, India is independent today. Where his spirit reached the people strife gave way to peace.

Ours is the way of death; his the way of life. Men cannot build government and atomic bombs, make peace and poison, at the same time. Either we go on in our suicidal preoccupation with violence and war, or we have done with the way of death and destruction and choose the the way of life—Gandhi's way of love and nonviolence.

St. Marys Schools

Congratulations to Elsie Carper on her courageous and graphic account of the sad state of St. Marys County's public schools in The Washington Post of September 26.

One of the problems that confronts the crusaders is a very serious diversion of public funds to private use. Your write-up states, "The county provides the school bus service for the parochial schools, last year at a cost of $60,000." This sum is approximately half of what the county spent to operate its public schools. Yet this diversion has actually been upheld, by the most remarkable judicial antics, in both the Maryland Appellate and the United States Supreme Courts.

The predicament in St. Marys might well serve as a warning to other communities. During last year's General Assembly, the Catholics of Prince Georges County introduced legislation providing for similar assistance to the parochial schools. The county's one Protestant school immediately opposed the bill and gave advance refusal to the acceptance of any behefit from the proposed diversion of public school funds.

One of the "supporting" arguments advanced by the bill's sponsors was that the parochial schools were taking a load off the public schools, and, therefore, were entitled to the assistance. The obvious inference from the argument is that the community having the most parochial schools should be able to provide the best facilities for its public school pupils.

Canadian Neutrality

In the event of war between the United States and Russia, which most of my American friends seem to consider as inevitable, the best possible assistance that Canada could render to the United States would be to remain neutral. Such a negotiated policy would provide the United States with a northern boundary fully protected by the neutrality of Canada.

To this suggestion one might say that Russia would not hesitate to violate the neutrality of Canada by sending planes from the north over Canada to attack the United States.

Such a violation of the internationally recognized principles of warfare would arouse the fighting spirit of millions of Americans who would demand revenge from the United States Government. Then—and only then—could the United States of make full use of the atomic bomb, and most thinking people throughout the world would conclude that violation of Canada's neutrality provided justification for an atomic bomb attack on Russia.

Justification is still an essential ingredient of so-called atomic warfare. Stockpiles of atomic bombs are useless to any nation unless justification for their use is fully established in the minds of the people.

Flaxseed Support Program

I have just received a copy of an article published in The Washington Post September 27 concerning the difficulties that exist between Commodity Credit Corporation and the flaxseed crushers. This article states that the representatives of the processors announced their refusal to pay $6 per bushel for flaxseed without warning to the Agriculture Department.

The situation in which the processors found themselves had been developing steadily for some time and had been discussed at various times with department officials. Processors were in reality merely acting as agents for the Commodity Credit Corporation in carrying out the $6 support program, as under the processor contract between the CCC and all flaxseed crushers, crushers agreed to pay not less than $6 per bushel for any flaxseed from the 1948 crop they might purchase. In this contract Commodity Credit Corporation gave crushers the right to sell resultant linseed oil to the CCC on a basis of 26.7 cents per pound f.o.b. mills in Zone 1.

This price for oil was sufficient to allow crushers to recover the $6 required to be paid for flaxseed under the contract, provided crushers were able to obtain $65 per ton for linseed meal resultant from processing the flaxseed. The contract provided that if crushers took advantage of the right given them to sell oil to the CCC under the contract, they would also pay the CCC one half of any amount they received in excess of $65 and up to $70 for the meal tonnage equivalent of the oil sold to CCC and the total amount they might receive in excess of $70.

At the time the contract was entered into last spring crushers asked the CCC for a $65 per ton guarantee on the meal should they be unable to sell their meal in commercial channels. This was refused and the contract was reluctantly accepted by crushers with only the linseed oil price guarantee.

As the flaxseed crop was being marketed during this summer, all protein meal prices, including linseed meal, declined sharply due to the market effect of the tremendous crops of feed grains, cottonseed and soybeans. The linseed meal market, instead of being $65 was quoted at around $59 per ton, which, with linseed oil selling at the minimum contract price of 26.7 cents f. o. b. mills in Zone One, represented a loss to crushers of about 14 cents per bushel on any flaxseed they might buy.

The meal price outlook was even more discouraging, as competitive meals for fall and winter shipments were quoted at about $50 per ton and it could be reasonably expected that linseed meal would eventually be forced considerably lower in price by the competition of this lower-priced cottonseed and soybean meal, so that in addition to the current loss of 14 cents per bushel crushers were faced with an additional loss of at least this amount.

At the request of the crushers a meeting was held with Department of Agriculture and Commodity Credit Corporation officials in Washington where the situation was thoroughly discussed and a proposal submitted to the CCC requesting that CCC underwrite 90 per cent of any loss due to linseed meal selling below $65 per ton over the course of the season.

At the time of this meeting crushers were still buying flaxseed in very substantial quantities, but at the meeting informed CCC officials that, unless some method were evolved to reimburse crushers for at least part of the loss sustained in carrying out the $6 support program, crushers would have no alternative but to withdraw from the market. The proposal submitted at this meeting was submitted to the board of directors of the Commodity Credit Corporation and was flatly rejected.

Following notification of this rejection, crushers then took the only course possible which was to withdraw from the flaxseed market. CCC thereupon started direct purchasing of flaxseed at the same $6 support price and this situation has continued to this date, with CCC having accumulated something over 17 million bushels of flaxseed so far.

Washington Calling

Russia And The Bomb

IN THE vast game of power politics being played out between the United States and the USSR, Andrei Vishinsky resorted to a bold threat when he hinted before the United Nations in Paris that Russia already has the atom bomb. On the basis of the latest confidential information, top level advisers here are convinced the Vishinsky threat was a transparent bluff.

The latest information comes from Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith, who flew from Moscow by way of Berlin and Paris to report on the current phase of the crisis with the Soviet Union. What Smith told the President and the Joint Chiefs of Staff here in Washington was, in essence, as follows:

It will be five years, perhaps even longer, before Russia can produce atomic bombs in sufficient numbers to make war. This is not, however, because of lack of the scientific knowledge to produce atomic fission.

What Russia lacks is the technology and the production that America has developed in the years before World War II and particularly under the stimulus of the war. In his talks, Smith was most emphatic on this point.

Thousands of heat compressors, thousands of precision instruments, a far-reaching industrial complex are essential to mass production of atomic bombs. Only the United States has an industry on that scale and the thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, of experts on every level to staff it. The Russian deficiency in these matters cannot be made up overnight.

But, as reported by Smith to the President, this advantage should not be taken by American policy makers as justification for the kind of moves that might force a war. The Ambassador to Moscow urged a policy of pacification that would stop just short of appeasement as represented by the surrender of Berlin to the Russians.

SMITH based his argument for caution on the extreme weakness of western Europe. The Russians have in the Soviet zone of Germany completely equipped troops and transportation to move on a moment's notice. The best advices indicate that they would reach the channel ports of France within 30 days at the outside.

This is a fact conveniently ignored by certain influential Air Force generals who talk brashly of a lightning war to last 30 days or, at, the most, three months. Such a war would be conducted by small fleets of high-speed planes dropping atomic bombs on strategic enemy centers.

Even a clear-cut victory would be meaningless so long as western Europe was occupied by Soviet troops supporting Communist governments in western European capitals. Such governments would come into power as Soviet troops approached the borders. No country of western Europe has any force in being to resist those troops, a fact well known both in Washington and in Moscow.

This is the perfectly obvious explanation of the French reluctance to proceed actively with the western defense alliance. What to do when the invaders come is the whispered fear of many a gathering in France.

Yet, as Ambassador Smith made clear, the chief hope lies in the precious time essential for building up defensive forces in the West. The bulk of the aid must come from this country.

WHAT SMITH reported, with respect to Russia's chief deficiency in the race for atomic weapons, bears directly on the present effort of the House Un-American Activities Committee to whip up an atomic spy scare. Ever since Hiroshima, leading scientists have been saying that the scientific know-how is the common property of nuclear physicists, and Russia has some first-rate nuclear physicists, throughout the world. Once Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves released the Smythe report telling the steps leading up to the successful discovery of atomic fission, there were few "secrets" for Russia or any other nation to discover.

When he was here recently for the centennial meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Prof. Harold Urey of the University of Chicago remarked wryly to a friend that he spent his waking hours trying to pound some knowledge of nucleonics into the heads of his graduate students, and with not too much success. Yet the hysteria-makers assumed that a stenographer visiting the Polish Embassy could disclose an atomic "secret."

Urey also said that if the entire Atomic Energy Commission here dropped into the Kremlin in Moscow, it would probably retard the Russian drive rather than advance it. This was his way of saying how little even the most conscientious layman spending 18 hours a day on the problem can learn about atomic energy. The Russian lack, it should be remembered by the nervous spy hunters, is America's extraordinary industrial machine.

Today and Tomorrow

The Soviet Proposal

THE LATEST Soviet note, which was published yesterday as a prelude to the meeting of the Security Council, asks for a meeting of the foreign ministers and "proposes that the directive to the commanders-in-chief agreed on August 30 should be recognized as an agreement between the governments . . . on the basis of which the situation in Berlin should be settled."

LIPPMANN

It is important to remember that the "directive of August 30," as worked out in Moscow by the three ambassadors and M. Molotov, was not "an agreement between the governments." It was understood, as the United States White Paper shows, that the "directive" was to become an "agreement" only if the four military commanders in Berlin could agree within a week, by September 7, on its "practical implementation." Had they been able to report agreement in Berlin, the discussions were to have been resumed in Moscow for the purpose of formulating "the ultimate draft communique." The military commanders disagreed and no final communique was negotiated in Moscow.

THE LATEST Soviet proposal would appear to be that the four foreign ministers' should take over the negotiations as of August 30, that is to say at the point where they were turned over to the four military commanders.

The Soviets are proposing that the four foreign ministers should attempt, on the basis of the tentative agreement of August 30, to reach that final agreement which the three ambassadors and M. Molotov never got to because the military commanders in Berlin did not agree.

THIS IS, at least technically, a strong position to take as the dispute goes before the United Nations. For Article 33 requires the nations "first of all to seek a solution by negotiation," and it would not be easy for us to argue that one week of discussion by four military commanders in Berlin exhausts the possibilities of negotiation. The new Soviet proposal to take the matter away from Sokolovsky, Clay, and Robertson in Berlin, and from the ambassadors in Moscow, and to deal with it at the higher level of the foreign ministers, is one which is likely to find much support in the United Nations.

THE REAL question is what would happen if the Council of Foreign Ministers met. We know pretty well by this time what the sticking point is: it is whether in return for a lifting of the blockade the Western powers will make a commitment to reconsider the London agreements and to postpone the establishment of the Frankfurt government.

Enough is now known about what actually happened in the Moscow discussions to warrant the conclusion that they broke down because Moscow would not agree to definite measures to lift the blockade until it had a firm public commitment from Washington to reconsider the Frankfurt government—and that Washington would not make this firm public commitment until the Soviets agreed to definite measures to lift the blockade.

THE PUBLIC record shows, though a bit dimly, that in theory there was an understanding reached at the first interview with Stalin that the lifting of the blockade would be followed by a review of the London decisions. The understanding could not, however, be made effective because Molotov insisted on making public and explicit what had been confidential and implicit.

That apparently is what the famous "reversal" of Stalin's agreement by the Politburo meant. Stalin at first was willing to accept a confidential and implicit understanding about the London agreements. But Molotov, for reason of prestige, suspicion, or to make trouble, insisted on a formal statement which bound the allies publicly before he relaxed his hold on Berlin.

THE SOVIETS now want the Council of Foreign Ministers to "settle" the situation in Berlin by treating the "directive of August 30" as "an agreement between the governments." The directive says nothing about the London agreements. On the other hand, a Council of Foreign Ministers to deal with Berlin and Germany would automatically consider the London agreements. Thus, the Western powers would avoid giving the public pledge which they have refused to give. But they would be carrying out, in return for the lifting of the blockade, what they have already said confidentially they were willing to do.

This is to be found in a message from the Department of State to Ambassador Smith before his first meeting with Stalin. The message says that: "September 1 does not represent the date of formal establishment of such a governmental organization. It is rather the date on which representatives from the German states will begin the exploratory study of the problems involved in the setting up of the common organization. It is certainly not intended that any conclusions that they reach shall preclude or contravene any agreement arrived at by the four powers on a government for all Germany."

Wholesale Meat Prices Drop Again

Chicago, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The price of hogs and of wholesale meat nosedived today, continuing the downward trend which began two weeks ago.

Hog prices plunged as much as $2.25 at some markets today and were down between $1 and $2 at all major Midwestern livestock markets.

Wholesale pork prices dropped as much as 4 cents a pound at Chicago today and the American Meat Institute reported that the wholesale price of dressed beef has dropped 6 cents a pound in recent weeks. Choice lamb has dropped 8 cents and hams an average of 9 cents. The institute said.

A spokesman for the Department of Agriculture said much of the decline in hog prices has been due to seasonal increases in shipments.

"Farmers are shipping their hogs to market in order to beat the price break," he said, "and of course, the more hogs that are shipped in, the faster the price goes down."

He said prices still are "relatively attractive" despite today's big drop which saw hogs selling for more than $6 under the all-time high price recorded last August.

The spokesman said today's low price was due to slow movement in the dressed meat trade as well as to increased shipments.

"Packers watch the wholesale market pretty closely," he said, "and with dressed meat down sharply, they do not bid so much for slaughter animals."

Negative Approach

By Sumner Welles

Crisis Demands Positive U. S. Strategy

THE WESTERN European peoples got their first explanation of the reasons for the termination of the Moscow negotiations from the Soviet press and radio. They were told that Russia had made reasonable concessions and that the break was solely due to the West.

The three western governments complain that Soviet propaganda jumped the gun "in violation of the understanding between the four powers." After its experience last spring with Molotov's phony peace offensive it seems incredible that the State Department should not have anticipated this maneuver. As it is, if war comes, millions of men and women in western Europe, who fear beyond all else that their countries will again become a battleground, will be suspicious of American complicity.

In this all-out contest for security and a free world we cannot afford to make such mistakes. This and other recent indications raise the question whether our national policy is as wise and as skillful as American statesmanship can make it.

It is well said that the supreme test of statesmanship is the avoidance of war.

Will the Kremlin permit the west to avoid war without appeasement? Is there still time for the exercise of statesmanship? Are the Western powers using the best statesmanship available?

THERE IS no ground for overoptimism in answering the first question. Soviet spokesmen are now for the first time calling the United States the "neo-Fascist successor" of Nazi Germany. The Soviet army's "indoctrination chief" in Germany howls, "The forces of the Soviet Union . . . will smash those who are creating a neo-Fascist world."

The impulse of the Politburo to risk war this year will grow as opposition within and without the iron curtain increases.

The supreme test of American statesmanship must be not only to avoid war but to prevent as well the collapse of the United Nations.

It is reported that Secretary Marshall, counter to the wishes of the French and British, and of at least one of his fellow delegates, insisted upon taking the Berlin controversy to the Security Council rather than to the Assembly, where the challenge to Moscow would have been less likely to cause an immediate showdown. The present trend of American policy seems to be to force the issue.

Should not American statesmanship seek to avert a final breach so long as that can be done without appeasement?

Should we not pursue a positive strategy rather than limit ourselves to the negative course of hating the Soviet Union to the international tribunal, however necessary this in itself may be? Should we not, for example, propose a solution for the key problem—the future of Germany—and agree to resume negotiations, provided the Berlin blockade is lifted pending their outcome?

INSTEAD of negotiating a military alliance with western Europe, outside of the United Nations, should we not strengthen the United Nations by negotiating such a treaty of collective security under Article 51 of the Charter?

The new Soviet proposal to outlaw atomic weapons is inadmissible unless it involves acceptance of the system of international control approved by the Security Council. But have we not more to gain than to lose by considering the other two Soviet proposals for disarmament, instead of dismissing them summarily as "suspicious," like Mr. Bevin?

Governor Dewey served the Nation well when he said, "We stand together to strengthen the hands of those who speak and work for us and for the cause of peace in Paris."

The decisions now to be made are as momentous as any in our history. The American people recognize the need for "standing together." The practical difficulty is that there cannot be the wholehearted support for our foreign policy that is essential unless there is genuine faith in the wisdom and capacity of those who "speak and work for us."

WHEN, in another presidential election year, we faced the international crisis of 1940, President Roosevelt did not hesitate to appoint outstanding Republicans to his Cabinet in order to secure national confidence in our defense policy.

If our foreign policy is to obtain the same kind of support today it must be bipartisan in fact as well as in name, and it must be determined by those whose wisdom and experience are unquestioned.

The vision and ability of John Foster Dulles could have proved most valuable in the conduct of our foreign relations. But it is no secret that this representative of the Republicans has been given little chance to influence policy.

Were Secretary Marshall, during this emergency, to be assisted by a board of advisers whose qualifications are recognized, and were the President to announce that their functions would be real rather than nominal, public support for our foreign policy would be overwhelming. If such a board comprised Senator Vandenberg and Mr. Dulles, and if its remaining members were selected from among such qualified Democrats as Mrs. Roosevelt and Senators Connally, George and Fulbright, there can also be no doubt that American statesmanship would be more likely to meet successfully its supreme tests.

Meeting Set Today in Effort To Settle D. C. Glazier Strike

Management and union representatives are scheduled to meet at 8 a. m. today in an attempt to settle the glaziers' strike which started Friday, Jay Oliver, Federal conciliator reported yesterday.

About 150 members of the AFL Glaziers Union, Local 963, went on strike Friday for wage increases of 5 cents more an hour than had been offered by contractors. The walkout folowed expiration Thursday night of the union's one-year contract with 13 contractors.

The union is asking for wage increases averaging about 8 per cent, according to Paul W. Jones, union business manager. Glaziers, or outside workers would receive from $2.25 an hour under the demands and glass workers' scales would range from $1.20 to $1.80 an hour, Jones said.

Increases which would be 5 cents an hour less than the union asks for have been offered by the contractors.

The union-management meeting will be held in the office of A. L. Amoss, chairman of the management negotiations committee, and manager of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., 1545 New York ave. ne., Federal Conciliator Oliver said.

Gas Firm's Net Still 50% Up In 8 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported a seasonal loss of $92,629 for August, but isn't feeling too bad about it although it's lots more deficit than the $6488 in August, 1947.

The company's net income in the first eight months remains 50 per cent higher than in the same 1947 period.

Faced with unprecedented demand for gas service, the company has been compelled twice this year to seek more capital to expand facilities. Currently, the gas firm is offering 102,000 more shares of common stock. Last January, an offering of 85,000 shares was snapped up.

Operating revenues for August totaled $709,706, a gain of $37,062 over the same 1947 month. Operating expenses of $755,927 were up $116,215 due mainly to "charges started this year for amortization related to the change-over to natural gas."

For the first eight months this year, net income amounted to $990,614, a sharp increase of $330,991 over the corresponding period last year. But those are only the figures for the parent company.

Washington Gas Light Co. and subsidiaries in Maryland and Virginia reported consolidated net income of $1,387,242 for the first eight months, a gain of $551,083 over the same 1947 period. Consolidated operating revenues of $12,674,064 increased $1,731,914. Operating expenses of $10,695,759 were up $1,218,058.

Meters in service in the District of Columbia numbered 171,244 at the end of August, an increase of 2046 for the past year.

In Appeal

U. S. to Hold War Damage Premiums

The Federal Government is with- its legal rights in keeping some 0 million dollars in premiums ntributed by six million holders War Damage Corporation insur- ce.

This ruling was made by the ited States Court of Appeals sterday in dismissing a case ought by Mr. and Mrs. Russell nowles of Rosemont, Pa. The nowles' were fighting for the turn of $18 in premiums paid ring the war.

The War Damage Corporation, w defunct, was federally organ- ed to insure property holders in is country from any damage e to the war. It was formed at time when private insurance mpanies were not willing to as- me this burden.

The war losses were infinitesi- al. Congress ordered that the surance premiums paid into the rporation be turned over to the ited States Treasury.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, eaking for the Appeals Court, ncluded on the right of the Gov- nment to keep the money:

"These appellants (Mr. and Mrs. Knowles) purchased a contract of protection. They received that which they purchased. That the Government which supplied the protection showed no losses charged against the premiums in its accounts, gives appellants no new contract rights. In principle, it might be that part of the war cost of supplying the protection afforded might be charged against these funds. In any event, we find nothing invalid in the act by which Congress directed the corporation to pay its surplus funds into the Treasury."

Florida Alerted For Hurricane

Miami, Fla., Oct. 4 (U.P.).—A new hurricane boiling out of the Caribbean Sea tonight threatened southern Florida with its second devastating storm in two weeks.

Rains preceding the hurricane already were falling in Miami and moving northward toward the Lake Okeechobee area where a storm two weeks ago did most of its 25-million-dollar damage to crops and homes.

The new storm was near the south shore of the westernmost tip of Cuba with 90 to 100-mile-an-hour winds whirling around its center. Hurricane-force winds covered an area about 40 miles from the center and gales reached out 100 miles.

Hurricane warnings were ordered hoisted in the Florida keys from Key Largo through Key West to Dry Tortugas, prison island of Civil War days and now a national park.

One on the Aisle—

Movie Costs Awe Visitor Pidgeon

By Richard L. Coe

WALTER PIDGEON draped his long, suave self into a chair at the Carlton yesterday afternoon and talked movies.

"Things are looking up in Hollywood," he said. "They've gotten rid of a lot of the dead wood profits that Britain, Europe and the Argentine had kept in harness. Costs, as everywhere, are way up and no one knows better than the top producers that product has got to be good to make a profit after the immense expenses are paid."

"How do you account for the fact," I asked, "that so many poor pictures, from a critical standpoint, make money and that so many deserving ones don't get a tumble?"

The Pidgeon diplomacy, which he exerted so effectively as the United States Ambassador to Mexico in "Holiday in Mexico," came to the fore. "Bad pictures," he went on, "aren't made on purpose. But the real test of a picture comes from whether audiences will pay to see it."

I replied that I didn't agree; that a good picture is still a good picture even if it can't make profits in Oscaloosa, Grand Rapids or Dead Gulch. "Don't you think," I asked, that the trouble lies in trying to make pictures for everyone; that in aiming for mass taste the tendency is toward standardization?"

"Pictures cost too much to make to purposely limit their appeal," he replied. "Take a picture called 'The Green Years,' which Metro made a couple of years ago. It had some of the finest actors in the world—Charles Coburn, Gladys Cooper, Hume Cronyn and his wife, Jessica Tandy, but not a name to sell it."

Which was where the suave Pidgeon had me. On getting back to my desk I checked to find that "The Green Years" was one of the champion pictures of 1946. In other words, despite the lack of box-office stars "The Green Years" did okay.

But there's no denying he's right on the complexities of movie financing.

"To make 'Command Decision,' which we've just completed at Metro," Walter continued, "the daily overhead was $24,000 a day. And picture making is a matter of months. When you talk of making pictures that don't pretend to offer the razzle-dazzle, say, of 'Hollywood in Mexico' or 'Luxury Liner,' you've got to speak in terms of big money, too.

"Julia" Is His Next

"But escape is what people seem striving for now," he went on, "and I know that's what you'll find in 'Julia Misbehaves,' in which I'm happy to be back with Greer Garson again. That's out and out comedy, complete escape from your daily newspaper headlines. Greer worked like a slave in that one and you'll find yourself laughing at it no matter what your thoughts when you go into the theater."

Pidgeon's in Washington for a few days. Last week he spent in New York going through the endless rehearsals which preceded each Theater Guild on the Air. Sunday night he did "The Letter" with Marlene Dietrich. He's bound for Chattanooga where next Monday night he'll play Andrew Jackson for NBC'S Calvade of America series, a role which in Tennessee corresponds to someone playing Joan of Arc in France.

Before being pushed into his defense of movies in general and the star system in particular, the affable Pidge, who's more of a veteran than he looks, reminisced, with gestures, about his old friend John Barrymore.

Mr. Minever's Advice

"Some years ago when I was doing a revue in London," he recalled, "Jack came back to my dressing room. He waited until everyone had gone and then asked me: 'Doesn't anyone ever tell you you stink?'

"'Not in so many words,' I told him, 'but once in a while they convey the idea.'"

"'Well,' said Jack,' you stank tonight. Always remember when you have nothing to do on the stage, don't make up business and flap around. Just do nothing. Do it magnificently, but do nothing."

"I had cause to remember that years later. I'd read the script of 'Mrs. Miniver' and thought it was great, but when it came to getting into the part, acting it, I found there wasn't much I could do. Fortunately I remembered Jack's words, which, he told me, his uncle, John Drew, had once given him. The part was important to 'Mrs. Miniver,' but the illusion lay not in anything he did. It lay in the power and force the man implied. And it was that very feature which made the man seem real."

The Pidge, as you can see, is a beguiling talker.

council, and a subsequent request that the State Health Department conduct a survey of local health facilities, stemmed directly from the League of Women Voters' "fact-finding" pamphlet, which jointly censured the health department and the city council for alleged shortcomings in the health program. It particularly criticized slum conditions, trash and garbage collection, allegedly lax inspections by the department of sanitation, sewage conditions and the rate of pay for health department employes, including Dr. Schafer.

At the time, Schafer contended he had frequently asked the city council to make improvements which he said would have corrected many of the conditions cited in the league report.

The State report, compiled by a survey committee headed by Dr. J. C. Neale, was submitted to city officials last Friday, but has not been released because only three copies were available, and the City Council wanted all members to digest it fully before making it available to the public.

Yankees Oust Harris; New Manager Not Named

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BOSTON, OCT. 4.—Baseball never turned up a more magnificent figure than today's Lou Boudreau, the man who won a pennant for the Cleveland Indians while thinking from a crouch. Today he came up to the most important ball game of his young life, cast as the fellow who must match managerial wits with nine-time-pennant winner, Joe McCarthy, and he won.

POVICH

Gee whiz, he was wonderful. He jicked a winning pitcher in Rookie Gene Bearden, and that may have been managerial genius, but Boudreau was not content to rely on Bearden alone. The biggest thing Boudreau had going for himself and the Indians today was Lou Boudreau himself.

When he went into the most accentuated batting crouch in the business, a caricature of all that is orthodox in hitting, he did his deepest thinking. He committed himself to the matchless strategy of the home run, and he hit two of them, and two singles in addition, and won the pennant for the Indians.

WHERE DO YOU stop at defining Boudreau? The guy is so burdened with his managerial responsibilities that he could merely finish second to Ted Williams in the American League batting championship with an average of only .357. He's so saddled with his multiple jobs of playing stortstop and managing the Indians that he could only make four hits to Williams' one today in the most important game of the year.

You watched him this afternoon, directing the Williams shift that he invented himself for the curbing of Williams' base hits, and saw him defeat the Red Sox slugger with an unconscionable pick-up behind second base where he had no business playing for any hitter except Williams. He got it on the short pick-up, and he acted like a guy who preferred those diabolical short hops that are the bane of the ordinary infielders.

Take him apart and you can expose him as a slow-moving, flat-footed shortstop who can't get a jump on the ball, can't beat out an infield hit and can't ever steal a base for you. His batting style is against all orthodoxy. Put him together, and you have the sixth-sense shortstop who is always in the right spot, and hits the ball he isn't supposed to hit.

HE EITHER HAS guts or pure genius, and you'd have to say he has more than a smattering of both. He wasn't supposed to pitch Gene Bearden, a left-hander, today. That was tempting the Red Sox hitters who could pepper that left field wall, but he did. And he was pitching Bearden with only one day's rest, but Boudreau thinks young guys can pitch with one day's rest.

Joe McCarthy didn't dare to pitch his left-hander, Mel Parnell, for the same reasons that Boudreau could have been frightened by right-handed hitters, but Boudreau wasn't. He was on the field an hour before the game, tossing grass blades into the wind and ascertaining that it wasn't blowing out too strongly; knowing that there would be no too-cheap homers, and he stuck to Bearden, the strong-arm kid.

The Indians had a manager who could set the style for them. He wasn't asking his ball players to do anything that he couldn't do himself, and he showed them how. Four hits off his own bat, two of them home runs. The Indians could hardly let down a guy like that. He was going to win the ball game, if he had to do it himself.

BILL VEECK wanted to trade him to the Browns before the season started. Veeck wasn't quite smitten with Boudreau as a manager, though valuing him as a shortstop. By a fortunate stroke, Veeck was turned down by the Browns on that deal, and found himself stuck with Boudreal. A luckier clubowner never lived. Without Boudreau this year, no pennant.

He's one of the reasons the Indians are the favorites to beat the Braves in the World Series. There is high talk of the Cleveland pitching—of Feller and Lemon and Bearden—of that nifty infield play that features Boudreau and Joe Gordon, of Jim Hegan, the league's best catcher. But that isn't all the Indians have going for them.

They have Boudreau to make those impossible plays, Boudreau to square off with Billy Southworth, Boudreau to get those big hits, Boudreau to tell the Indians what to do and show them how to do it. There's nothing like him on the Braves. The Indians should win it, in five.

Eddie Collins Almost in Tears

Joe McCarthy Says 'This Isn't First Time, I've Lost Before'

Boston, Oct. 4 (AP).—Always a good winner, Manager Joe McCarthy qualified as a good loser today after his Boston Red Sox were overwhelmed by the Cleveland Indians in the first playoff game in the American League history.

"This isn't the first time I've been licked before," Marse Joe said.

That was as far as he got before Vice President Eddie Collins reached him.

It seemed as if Collins were about to break into tears. His lips quivered, his eyes were watery as he grasped McCarthy's hand in both of his and said:

"You're still tops with me."

While the screaming victory celebration in the Indians' dressing room at Fenway Park was at its height, Lou Boudreau called a meeting of the squad.

That's an indication of how the Indians took their 8 to 3 victory over the Red Sox in the first pennant playoff in American League history.

Boudreau, who withheld the news that Bearden would pitch today until the teams actually took the field, had this explanation for his strategy:

"I told him yesterday after our meeting but I knew there would be a lot of clamor on the train and people would be bothering him, so I didn't say anything. I wasn't trying to fool anybody. He pitched a great game and he deserves a lot of credit."

And a little over 600 miles to the west, in Cleveland on a hospital bed where he had cheated death, Pitcher Don Black smiled wanly at a grinning nurse and said "I think they did O. K."

Black, the Alcoholics Anonymouse pitcher who last year hurled a no-hitter for the Indians, was stricken with a brain hemorrhage September 13. He has only been off the danger list a few days.

Tribe 7-20 Choice To Win World Series

St. Louis, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Oddsmaker James J. Carroll said today the Cleveland Indians are 7-to-20 betting favorites over Boston in the series.

The odds against the Braves are 11 to 5.

In the first game with Bob Feller, the odds are 3 to 5 for Cleveland and 7 to 5 for the Braves pitching Johnny Sain.

With Sain against Bob Lemon, the odds on Boston are 13 to 10, and on Cleveland 13 to 20.

Roach Loses To Hansbury

After eight rounds of leaning, waltzing and powder-puff punching both parties, local Middleweight Johnny Hansbury, 159, was awarded an unanimous decision over Laverne Roach, 155½, of Plainview, Tex., here last night.

Only 558 customers turned out for the first indoor card at Turner's Arena. They paid a gross of $1,325.39, net of $987.51.

Roach, a strong favorite, suffered a puffy left eye late in the feature. His loss resulted from his efforts to hurt Hansbury with 3-inch punches and while resting against his opponent's chest. Hansbury led all the way.

In four-rounders, Garland Edwards, 153½, decisioned George Brooks, 161½, and Walter Ham, 129, knocked out Mike Martin, 134, in 1:05 of the final heat.

Five-rounders went to Johnny Holt, 163½, by knockout over Slim Gravette, 166½, in 1:34 of the second; Julian Keane, 163, by decision over Holy Mims, 166½; and Jackie Ford, 141, by TKO over Miles Jones, 145, in :27 of the first round.

Ostermueller Released

Pittsburgh, Oct. 4 (AP).—Fritz Ostermueller, 41-year-old southpaw pitcher, today was released by the Pittsburgh Pirates on his own request.

Indians Win Flag With 8-3 Victory

scaled the wall with home-run clouts. Keltner massaged it twice with a single and a two-bagger. Larry Doby, the Indians' muscular Negro center fielder, bounced two important two-baggers off the fence in left center. The Red Sox pet ally, their left-field fence, was a fickle thing today.

High secrecy surrounded the pitching choices of Boudreau and Joe McCarthy before game time, and then they were announced—young Bearden for the Indians and 37-year-old Dennis Galehouse for Boston. McCarthy was going with experience and the slider of the soft-balling Galehouse. Boudreau passed up the veterans Bob Feller and Bob Lemon to nominate the hard-balling Bearden for this big one.

Boudreau was a gambler today. He didn't stop at his high faith in Boudreau. He had Allie Clark, an outfielder, playing first base for the Indians, for the first time this season. He was loading his lineup with hitters who might pepper that left field wall.

A Laddie Known As Lou

He fired the first shot himself. Two Indians had been retired, y Galehouse in the opening inning, and Cleveland was achieving nothing when the laddie known as Lou sounded the tocsin or whatever it is that is the battle call.

With the count of two balls and one strike against him, he straightened out of his batting crough and drilled Galehouse's next pitch over the left field fence for a homer.

In full cry, Fenway Park fans urged the Red Sox to get that run back and they did, with rapidity. Johnny Pesky lashed a liner to right center and beat it out for a two-bagger with one out. Boudreau personally disposed of Ted Williams with his patented Williams' shift that enabled him to gobble up a ground ball near second base, but with two out Vern Stephens connected. A single past Keltner tied the score at 1-1.

That was the acme of the Red Sox's performance today. Never again were they to be on even terms with Boudreau's crew. Bearden held them tight in the grip of what was to be a five-hit pitching job, and the Indians beat the stuffing out of this Boston team that was supposed to make it an all-Boston world series.

Boudreau Starts Big Inning

Came the fourth inning and Boudreau again. He started it with a solid single to left. Joe Gordon smacked a single past Pesky and there were men on first and second with none out. But now the Indians were no longer interested in trifling singles. The venerable Ken Keltner, a power hitter when he guesses right, connected with a 2-and-2 pitch, and the repercussions were manifold.

Out of the park went the ball, on a meteor flight over the left field wall. Stomping across home plate came Boudreau, then Gordon, both of them hovering by to greet Keltner as he leisurely crossed the plate, too.

Out of the ball game went their victim Galehouse. Ellis Kinder was the new Boston pitcher.

But the Indians were hungry for more, and they got one more to make it a four-run inning. Larry Doby thumped a two-bagger off the left field wall that was supposed to be made for right-handed hitters. Bob Kennedy laid down a sacrifice. Hegan bounced a grounder at Stephens but there was no play at the plate, for it bordered on a hit-and-run play and Doby was off with the pitch. Stephens had to be content with throwing Hegan out at first, and the Indians had a 5-1 lead.

In another park that might suffice, but not always in Boston, where runs can come cheaply, so Boudreau in the next inning hit another homer. The bases were empty, and two were out when he struck, but the 2-1 pitch was so much to his liking that he clouted it over the left-field wall.

Now it was 6-1 Cleveland, and they had the game and the pennant in, barring a complete fold-up. Bearden's curve ball was a vibrant thing, alive and hopped up, and from the second to the sixth inning he allowed only one hit. And then the Sox suddenly got back in the ball game, with the help of a break.

With one out, Joe Gordon camped under Ted Williams' sky-scraping pop-up, but it came down a twisting, diabolical thing, and Gordon muffed it back on the grass behind second base for the only Cleveland error of the day.

Only one was out, but Bearden bore down to fan Vern Stephens for the second out. Bobby Doerr, though, answered the pleas of Fenway Park with a solid clout that sailed over the left-field wall for his 27th homer of the season, and the Sox had the Indians' lead cut to 6-3.

That was as close as they ever did get. Bearden held 'em to one hit—Williams' futile eighth-inning single—from that point. Meanwhile, the Indians were giving him another one-run cushion in the seventh.

Doby led off that seventh with his second two-bagger off the wall in left, but closer to center this time. Kennedy sacrificed him to third, and Hegan was purposely passed to bring Bearden up. Catcher Birdie Tebbetts outguessed the Indians and called for a pitch-out with the squeeze play on, and Doby was a dead duck racing into third.

But Hegan raced to second on the rundown and he scored on the most dismal play of the afternoon. Ted Williams caught Bearden's high fly to left center, then dropped it for an error.

The Indians poured it on in the eighth with Kinder still in there. Robinson beat out a fuzzy grounder to Stephens for an infield hit, and Boudreau came up again. His fourth straight hit was a single to left.

A wild pitch by Kinder that skimmed Tebbetts' frantically upstretched mitt moved the runners to second and third, and Gordon was purposely passed. Keltner grounded to Stephens for a double play, but the Indians had their eighth run and Cleveland's first pennant since 1920.

A HERO TO TEAMMATES—Jubilant Cleveland Indians carry Pitcher Gene Bearden off the field after he hurled a five-hit, 8-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox yesterday for the American League pennant in the junior circuit's first playoff in history

Braves Name Sain to Open Against Tribe

Boston, Oct. 4 (U.P.). — Johnny Sain, a strong-armed right-hander who won 24 games this season, was named tonight to pitch the World Series opener for the Boston Braves Wednesday, but Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians refused to select a nominee.

"We won the big one today," he said. "We'll let Wednesday take care of itself."

But the hero shortstop manager of the Indians wasn't fooling anybody, for it was perfectly obvious that he would send one of his two Bobs—Feller or Lemon—to the firing line.

Both of them pitched what almost amounted to a ball game in the bullpen today as Rookie Gene Bearden hurled the Indians to their first American League pennant in 28 years.

They were ready in case Gene needed help—but he didn't ask—the Indians beat the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 3, to win the first pennant playoff in American League history.

The Bobs, Feller who has won 19, and Lemon, who has won 20, were both ready to go.

"I might make up my mind tomorrow," Boudreau said.

The betting was it would be Feller, who was a dismal failure Sunday when the Indians lost to the Detroit Tigers, necessitating today's playoff. He was batted out of the box in the third inning, so he will have had two days rest if he goes Wednesday.

As the Indians belted the Red Sox at Fenway Park this October afternoon, Manager Billy Southworth of the Braves, came right out into the open.

"It will be Sain, of course," he said.

Pick-the-Winners Grid Contest Opens

The Washington Post today begins its 1948 Pick-The-Winner football contest. It will be conducted weekly through November 20.

The first thing for you to bear in mind is that this is a contest of skill. Do not expect your luck to make you a winner. This contest is designed to reward those who know their teams and are students of football. Follow the accounts of the teams, study the scores week by week. Then make your choices of the winners.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post and announced well in advance of the game.

The contest each week will include 20 of the major college games in the Nation. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games.

A twenty-first (21st) game is listed on which the "Probable Score" will be given by each contestant.

Cubs Trade Bill Nicholson

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Bill Nicholson, veteran Chicago Cubs outfielder, was traded today to the Philadelphia Phillies for Outfielder Harry Walker.

Nicholson, 33, a left-handed batter, tied the major league record by leading the National League in both home runs and runs batted in two consecutive years, 1943 and 1944.

He hit 28 homers and drove in 128 runs in 1943, and had 33 homers and 122 runs batted in the following year.

Nicholson never regained his form of those two seasons and had been considered trading bait for several years. He had been with the Cubs for 10 straight seasons.

"Nick" hit 19 homers this year and drove in 67 runs. His batting average was .261.

Walker, who went to the Phillies last year in a trade with the St. Louis Cardinals, led the league in batting last season with .363. He played in only 111 games this year, however, and hit .287.

52,765 See Bears Down Cards, 28-17

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Chicago Bears slashed and passed to a 28-17 National Football League victory over the defending champion Cardinals before this city's biggest professional game crowd, 52,765, at Comiskey Park tonight.

The outcome before the overflow throng seriously jarred the Cardinals' hope to repeat as western division champions and stamped the Bears as strong title favorites.

The champions erased an early 14-0 Bear lead and forged ahead 17-14 midway in the third period.

But on the Cardinal kickoff seconds later, Bear Halfback Frank Minani returned 95 yards in a dazzling touchdown run which settled the issue.

That gave the Bears a 21-17 lead and a fourth touchdown on Sid Luckman's 6-yard shot to Noah Mullins, also in the third period, was just added insurance.

J. R. Boone, a scatback rookie from Tulsa, flitted over for the first two Bear touchdowns.

Both of the Cardinal touchdowns came on passes with Ray Mallouf pitching short to Mal Kutner in the second period and looping a 35-yard pay-off toss to Boris Dimancheff in the third stanza.

Pat Harder's 30-yard field goal late in the second period, along with his two point conversions rounded out the Cardinal scoring.

Fan Dumps Series Ticket Problem In Veeck's Lap

San Mateo, Calif., Oct. 4 (U.P.). Leo Amster of San Mateo decided today that he wouldn't take gas after all.

A few days ago Amster wired President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians asking for reservations and threatening "You must hold one set box seats or will take gas."

Veeck wired back: "Suggest poison. It's easier, for there are no seats available."

However, Amster boarded the train for Cleveland today after sending Veeck this telegram:

"Sent gas pipe and poison to McCarthy of the Red Sox. I'll see the Series if I must sit on your lap. Shall we dance?"

Car Credit Wins In Metro Play, 31-0

Successor Won't Be Member of 1948 Team

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Stanley (Bucky) Harris is out as manager of the New York Yankees and the club announced the successor would not be picked from its present player list.

That Harris' contract would not be renewed next year was announced after a meeting among President Dan Topping, General Manager George M. Weiss and Harris.

The decision was by "mutual agreement," the terse Yankee announcement said.

New Manager Later

The new manager will be chosen at a future date, it added, and considered for the post are several men "not including a player active with the 1948 team."

Harris succeeded Jonnny Neun as pilot of the Yankees at the end of the 1946 season and led the club to the American League pennant and a World Series victory over Brooklyn.

New York missed the championship this year by two and a half games, losing out on the next-to-last day of the season in the torrid race with Cleveland's ultimate winners and the Boston Red Sox.

No reason was given for the break, but there have been reports that Harris and Weiss didn't see eye-to-eye in the handling of farm talent.

Harris Going to Detroit?

Harris' plans were not known immediately. Rumors are he will join the Detroit Tigers in some executive capacity.

Harris' only comment was: "We parted on friendly terms. I am now a free man. That is all I can say."

Harris' ouster followed on the heels of the resignation of Ray Flaherty as coach of the football Yankees. Flaherty resigned his post last month and was succeeded by Norman (Red) Strader, one of his assistants.

Jim Turner High on List

Recently there has been speculation the next Yankee boss would be a member of the present crew—possibly Joe DiMaggio or Tommy Henrich.

The front office announcement seems to close the door on this possibility.

Among those regarded as high in favor for the job is Jim Turner, former New York pitcher who is manager of Portland in the Pacific Coast League.

Turner, who didn't get his major league break until he was in his thirties, also pitched for the Boston Braves and Cincinnati Reds.

Harris began his professional baseball career with Muskegon in the Central League in 1916. An infielder, he moved to Washington in 1919 after stops at Norfolk, Reading and Buffalo.

He became manager of the Senators in 1924 and won pennant his first two years. He directe Washington through 1928 when h went to Detroit.

Bucky skippered the Tige through 1933, managed the Bosto Red Sox in 1934 and returned t Washington in 1935, remainin through 1942.

Then he went with the Philade phia Phillies for a year befor moving to Buffalo for two yea of managing in the minor leagu

Dead Heat in Steeplechase at Laurel Makes Md. Racing History

by Photochart

First Since Photo Finish Installation

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 4.—A stopping horse and a charging horse came into the wire as a team today and wrote Maryland racing history.

It was the first dead heat in a steeplechase race on a professional track since the installation of the photo finish. The only other dead heat recorded in a jumping event in this country was in 1936 at Belmont Park.

The all-even battle at the wire was waged by the Rokeby Stables' Genancoke, owned by Paul Mellon of Pittsburgh, and the Auburn Farm's Floating Isle, the property of T. T. Mott of Washington, and saddled by Miss Judy Johnson, the outstanding woman trainer.

The two geldings carried identical weight of 146 pounds.

Field Rides Genancoke

Jockey Tommy Field rode Genancoke and virtually "carried" the tiring son of Gino into the wire. Jockey Frank D. Adams had the mount on Floating Isle and brought the son of Battleship along to have him almost flying at the end.

So tight were the horses at the finish that several in the press box called it a dead heat although it was only for a mere fraction of a second that their noses were together. A yard in front of the wire, Genancoke had a neck advantage but Floating Isle flew past him as if he were tied to a pole.

There was no argument about third money. That went to Mrs. E. Dupont Weir's Galatic in the field of six going about two miles over 13 fences with the winner clocked in 3:53. It was the first steeplechase of the major track fall season in the State.

The finish was judged with the photochart camera used at this track and Pimlico. The line caught Genancoke on the inside and Floating Isle on the outside each with the tip of his nose beyond the nostril on the victory strip.

Genancoke Pays $2.40

In the share-the-wealth twin payoff, Genancoke, coupled with S. C. Clark, jr.'s, My Good Man as the Trainer Jack Skinner entry, returned a $2.40 mutuel with Floating Isle's backers taking down $3.80.

Qualifying for a favorite role in the $10,000-added Sagamore Stakes to be run here on October 15, Henry L. Straus' Pilaster came from last place to win the $3500 Bethesda Purse, sixth and feature race.

The track was marked fast for the first time of this 25-day meeting and Pilaster galloped the mile and a sixteenth in 1.47 1/5 when he got up to win by a length and a half from Christiana Stable's Alexis, the favorite. Mrs. Helene K. Haggerty's Petrol Point was third with G. R. Watkins' Cat Bridge fourth.

Coupled in the wagering with the inconsistent sprinter, The Doge, Pilaster returned a win mutuel of $5.40 and gave Apprentice William Gilbert, leading rider of the Atlantic City meeting, his second victory at this meeting.

G. W.'s Butkus Gets Tackle Trial With Redskins Today

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

In the wake of their startling 41-10 rout of the favored New York Giants, the Redskins yesterday did a lot of pardonable bragging, released a seasoned guard and promised a local college star a try-out at tackle.

Cut from the squad was Henry Harris, 278-pound former Texas lineman, leaving the Eastern Division, National Football League, leaders two short of the player limit of 35 as they looked ahead to this week's return match with the Steelers in Pittsburgh . . . Reporting for practice today will be Carl Butkus, George Washington University's ace of 1947, who was recently turned loose by the New York Yankees. . . . Butkus, a 25-year-old, 235-pounder, dropped around Redskin headquarters and said he didn't want a contract on the spot, just a tryout.

The whole Gilmer family, not just All-American Harry, the Redskins' publicized passing rookie, is ailing at the moment . . . Mr. and Mrs. are both in Georgetown Hospital, Harry nursing the leg injury that has limited him to about six plays this year and will keep him out of the Pittsburgh game, and Katherine receiving prenatal care . . . Two-year-old Connie, being cared for by Mrs. John Sanchez, wife of the Skins' stellar tackle, has an eye infection

The 32,000 fans who booed Washington's lengthy huddles Sunday must be satisfied with General Manager Dick McCann's explanation . . . "It's because Sammy Baugh, even at 34, is still a collegian in the sense that he gives a little pep talk with each signal" . . . Actually, according to McCann, all Baugh needs to say during the 30 seconds in the huddle is something like "45—A—O—Pinch—26." . . . But after that formality of signal-calling he carries on like this: "Remember, Hugh, go down only 15 yards, not 20, and John you be sure to get that end. I'll wait as long as I can but you guys have got to hold . . ."

50,000 to See Colts Tonight

Baltimore, Oct. 4 (AP). — The Cleveland Browns tomorrow come up against the Baltimore Colts, a team it helped build to a point where it looms as the Eastern threat to Western dominance of the All-American Football Conference.

The clash is expected to draw as many as 50,000 fans to the Babe Ruth Stadium.

Baltimore, the surprise of the conference with three wins out of four to lead the Eastern division, already has beaten the Browns. That was in an exhibition game, 21-17, which left more than just the defeat to rankle the two-time conference champs.

The Colts put four Cleveland regulars out of action and one of them, End Dante Lavelli, still is sidelined.

Cleveland has won four straight conference games in its quest for its third straight title. A loss tomorrow night will endanger its chances of winning the Western division, since San Francisco also is undefeated in six games.

Fred Haas Wins Playoff

Portland, Ore., Oct. 4 (AP).—Lanky Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, won the three-way play-off for the Portland Open Golf Tournament today, defeating Ben Hogan and Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C.

Haas carded a two-under par 70 to beat out Hogan, with a 71. Palmer blew his chances when he took a dub's eight on the par five fifteenth. He finished with a 75.

A WORD FROM THE WIVES OF BUSINESS TRAVELERS about TWA

"JOHN SPENDS LESS TIME AWAY..."

One of the things wives appreciate most about TWA is the way the speed of Skyliner travel cuts days-long trips to mere hours. In many cases the husband can go to a distant city and return home the same day, where previously he was away two or three days. By TWA, even a business trip to Europe can be completed in a few days instead of weeks!

"FRED HAS A BIGGER PAYCHECK..."

A businessman can cover lots more territory when he plans his trips around convenient TWA schedules. TWA's speed works like seven-league boots to increase his productivity and his paycheck! Distant customers can be contacted more often, new sales areas can be opened up and greater profits made with the help of TWA.

"BILL ISN'T 'ALL TIRED OUT' ANY MORE..."

The comfort of Skyliner travel is another feature that makes things easier for the wives of business travelers. Husbands don't drag in after a long trip too tired to be any fun. The smoothness of Skyliner flight high above the weather, the courteous service and the short time required for a "long" trip all combine to cut travel fatigue to a minimum on TWA . . . the "Businessman's Airline."

SPEED WAY TO WORLD POINTS.

All key points on TWA's coast-to-coast system are directly linked to TWA's world routes. Five-mile-a-minute Skyliners bring many areas of Europe to within a day's time of the U.S. Africa, the Middle East and Asia are only a few hours farther away.

TWA is the way to travel in the U.S.A. and overseas

Diffenbaugh's 68 Leads Mid-Atlantic Pro-Am

Darkness Halts Play With 16 Still on Course

Although daylight ran out on 16 pros before they could finish, George Diffenbaugh's four under par 68 seemed a pretty safe bet to win the pro sweepstakes in the Middle Atlantic Pro-Amateur staged yesterday at Prince Georges Country Club.

The stranded players will get a chance to finish tomorrow if they want it, but there was only a remote chance that any of the 16 could match Diffenbaugh's score.

The little Kenwood Country Club pro, his irons hitting the greens with clocklike precision, was all alone, three strokes ahead of his nearest rivals. Seven pros were stacked in second place with 71s.

Diffenbaugh combined with Lou Heath who brought in a 96-24—72 to tie for first place in the pro-amateur. Wiffy Cox, Congressional Country Club pro, and Edgie Johnston, Prince Georges also had a 140.

Lew Worsham, down from Pittsburgh, couldn't find the greens, and turned in a 74.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Drafted U. S. Workers Can Get Promotions Under New Ruling

PROMOTIONS: The Comptroller General has handed down an important decision on promotions which could affect a lot of people. He has decided that Federal workers who are drafted into the military service can be given both grade and in-grade promotions. This will be something new in Government.

The decision, of course, will benefit the young men who will be drafted. However, it will have the effect of blocking grade promotions and better jobs for all other employes. When a job opens up in an office a drafted employe can be promoted to it on paper and someone else will be given the post on an acting basis but without the higher pay.

STORY: The Patent Office is being plagued by a radio giveaway program. Each day brings letters, wires, phone calls and callers who want to know who was the first woman to b issued a patent. Even several Congressmen have called up to get the answer for constituents. The answer is supposed to be worth $2000. Here's the answer: The first woman to be issued a patent was Mary Kies of Killingly, Conn., who was given a patent on May 5, 1809, for a device to weave straw with silk or thread.

NOTES: Robert E. Friedman has been promoted to associate director of Interior's Oil and Gas Division . . . Another promotion is that of Henry F. Alves to director of the school administration division of the Office of Education . . . Civil Service has announced an exam for inspection officer job in the United States Public Health Service. The jobs pay $4479 a year to start . . . Virginia's excellent Barter Theater will present "The Pursuit of Happiness" Thursday night at the Arlington Farms Recreation Building. Special prices for Federal workers. Call either Sterling 5088 or Republic 7307 for tickets.

JOBS: The Naval Powder Factory at nearby Indian Head, Md., has exams open for welder, plasterer, brick and stone mason, plumber, sheetmetal worker, boilermaker, carpenter, painter, electrician, and pipefitter. The jobs pay from $1.27 to $1.63 an hour . . . An exam for bacteriologist jobs at salaries ranging from $3727 to $10,305 a year is open. Jobs are to be filled at the Army Medical Center and the National Institute of Health.

CAA: The streamlining of Civil Aeronautics Administration which was first tipped off in this column was officially announced yesterday. It will take place on November 1.

Administrator Delos W. Rentzel said the revamping would result in a reduction of personnel both here and in the field. He made no estimate of the number to be laid off but another CAA source said it would eventually be no more than 400 out of the 17,300-man staff. The agency has 1200 in the city.

Immediate changes will be in the top-drawer staff. Fred B. Lee will be the deputy and the jobs of the other two deputies will be abolished. Charles T. Stanton, a deputy, is on leave with the Brazilian government. The third deputy, George Burgess, will be reassigned.

The jobs of seven assistants to the administrators will be wiped out. The work of five of them will be assigned to the operating divisions. The titles of assistant administrator will be wiped out and the operating heads will be called office directors. Rentzel indicated several changes may be made in this personnel layer.

One certain change is that of H. A. Hook, the assistant for airports, who will go to Los Angeles to be superintendent of airports. Edgar N. Smith will be acting airports chief after October 15. The Office of Field Operations will be abolished and its director, Howard Rough, will be reassigned. The regional office chiefs will report direct to Administrator Rentzel.

Two new offices to be set up are of program planning and evaluation and of aviation development. Offices of safety, airways, airports and business administration will be continued but there will be a general shifting of functions.

Rentzel said the streamlining would reduce CAA's present costs of doing business. However, he plans to ask for an even larger CAA budget for next year, the big increase to be for the Federal airway program, a capital investment.

"These changes," Rentzel said, "will best enable the CAA to perform the tasks assigned to it by the Congress." He said the suggestions for changes came from two intra-agency committees, one of the regional directors and the other on headquarters operations. He said no change was planned in the operation of the Washington Airport.

POLITICS: Another one of those typically political general charges against Federal workers was made yesterday by Representative Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.). Without naming a single name or agency, Harness made the broad charge that personnel of the executive agencies are being utilized in the current campaign by the Democrats.

"Some of the bitterest and most unfair statements and speeches to come out of the present campaign have been prepared and distributed by Federal employes at the taxpayers' expense."

Harness said he had instructed his staff to keep tab on violations which will be turned over to the Justice Department and the Civil Service Commission for action.

Area Polio Total Hits 190 With 5 New Cases

District Count Reaches 103, 84 More Than Same Time, 1947

Five new cases of polio were reported to the District Health Department yesterday, bringing the number so far this year in Greater Washington to 190, as compared with 43 at this time last year.

Of the new cases, two are from the District, two from Prince Georges County, Md., and one from nearby Virginia. Cases reported bring the District total this year to 103, compared with 19 on the same date in 1947.

Under treatment at Children's is a 9-year-old boy from the 5000 block of 56th ave., in Hyattsville.

Receiving home treatment is a 10-month-old girl from the 600 block of C st. ne.

Flier Is Freed On Bond in Rape Charge

Lieut. William Alger Dawes, jr., 28-year-old war hero charged with rape by a Washington nurse, was released on bond of $1500 yesterday after a habeas corpus hearing in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro.

Lieutenant Dawes, who lives at 1235 Alabama ave. se., is stationed at Bolling Field as a pilot. The nurse charged he threatened her with a pistol and forced her to submit in his parked automobile.

The lieutenant said he merely placed the gun on a shelf in the car in case there might be a marauder. He said he had been reading about the Glen Burnie murder case.

A preliminary hearing scheduled for yesterday in police court at Upper Marlboro was postponed until Friday. Court attaches said this postponement indicated the case would be presented directly to the county grand jury, which convened yesterday.

Arlington Autoist Kills Pedestrain Near Alexandria

A 60-year-old Lorton, Va., man, Charles Pearson, was killed instantly last night when struck by an automobile on U. S. Highway No. 1, about 12 miles south of Alexandria.

Virginia State police said Pearson, a pedestrain, was struck by a car driven by L. R. Hunt, 4310 34th st. S., Arlington. The accident occurred shortly before midnight.

Police said Pearson was within three-fourths of a mile of his home when hit. Police said Hunt was driving north on Highway No. 1 at the time of the accident.

Audience Acclaim Will Decide Home Show Queen

Selection of the "Home Show Queen" will be made by audience applause at the 1948 annual Home Show Exhibit rather than by a panel of judges.

This charge was determined at a special meeting of the board of directors of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, James W. Pearson, executive director, said. The group is sponsoring the exhibition at the National Guard Armory, October 16 to 24.

Kickoff dinner for the exposition will be held Thursday in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel, Pearson said.

The Symphony Orchestra Begins Rehearsals

LEADER AND COMPOSER—Director Hans Kindler (left) and Robert Ward look over a Ward composition, "Serenade," to be introduced by the National Symphony Orchestra

Kindler Leads Symphony in 1st Rehearsal

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

Hans Kindler directed the first rehearsal of the coming National Symphony season yesterday afternoon in Clendenen Gymnasium of American University.

Greeting the 85 members of this year's orchestra after a summer spent in this country and South America, Kindler spoke briefly.

"I hope you are all feeling as well as I am," he opened. "Let us see this year if we can play the best our talents will permit, and perhaps later in the year even a little better."

While the orchestra went through a reading of the first symphony of Sibelius, scheduled for opening night, Thursday, October 14, Robert Ward, composer from New York City, listened attentively. The young musician had come to Washington to hear Kindler read through his recently completed Serenade for stringed instruments.

Ward's second symphony received its world premiere from the local orchestra last season, and his first symphony has been heard here several times. Kindler also played the first symphony this year in South America.

The new Serenade is, according to the composer, a symphony composed for strings. He described its three movements as "a pastoral movement, sort of partheist—the middle movement is a blues, although not all of the time—and the final movement is a bright, rapid section."

SOLOIST—Sylvia Meyer, who will be a featured soloist with the orchestra, tunes her harp

Col. Cole Named D. C. Staff Chief

Col. John T. Cole, General Staff Corps, of 7 West Grove Drive, Belle Haven, Alexandria, has been named chief of staff of the Military District of Washington, succeeding Col. Cornelius C. Jadwin who retired from the service on September 30, it was announced yesterday.

A native of West Point, N. Y., Colonel Cole was graduated from the United States Military Academy there in 1917. He has attended the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the Cavalry School at Fort Riley, Kans. During the recent war, he served in the European theater of operations as commander of Combat Command "B" with the Fifth Armored Division.

Rosh Hashonah Services Mark Start of Jewish Year 5079

Emergence of the state of Israel is "the political, geographical and social expression of an inner spiritual urge," Rabbi Solomon H. Metz said yesterday at Rosh Hashonah services at Adas Israel Congregation, 600 I st. nw.

Rosh Hashonah services, celebrating the beginning of the year 5079 of the Hebrew calendar, were held in congregations throughout the city.

The holiday which began at sundown Sunday, ended at sundown last night for Reformed Jews. It will be celebrated again today in conservative and orthodox synagogues, ending at sundown.

Rabbi Metz described the new state of Israel as "a fulfillment of prophecies uttered some 2700 years ago." "This state," he added, "is coming at a time when many of the cultural values of civilization are in deterioration and men everywhere are in quest of the redeeming word of the spirit."

The piercing blast blown on the shofar, or ram's horn, as part of the ritualistic service was described by Rabbi Metz as shattering "the walls of Jericho of our matter-minded world.

Speaking before the B'nai Israel Congregation, 14th and Emerson sts. nw., Rabbi Henry Segal said: "Not alone is Rosh Hashonah a day of judgment but every day now that we experience is a day of judgment.

"The prime challenge of our time to us is to think, to think straight and clearly on the issues that touch vitally our lives and lives even of generations yet unborn."

Mme. Bonnet To Address Chest Rally

French Envoy's Wife to Help Start Residential Unit Fund Campaign

Madame Henri Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, will address a luncheon rally of Community Chest Federation residential workers and women's clubs representatives Wednesday.

The luncheon, slated for the Washington Hotel, will precede by one day the formal opening of the Chest's 1949 fund campaign here. This year's goal is $4,566,790.

Honor guests who will attend the Wednesday luncheon will include Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States; wives of seven associate justices of the Supreme Court, and wives of eight Cabinet members.

To Launch Unit Drive

The purpose of the luncheon meeting is to launch the work of the campaign Residential Unit, whose chairman is Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel, wife of the canon of Washington Cathedral.

Volunteers of the Residential Unit will begin their house-to-house canvass Thursday. Soliciting by the other units—Business, Special Gifts, Government and those in Alexandria and the four nearby counties—also gets under way this week.

An army of more than 20,000 volunteers will campaign for Community Chest funds during the drive which will extend through November 4.

The opening day of the campaign—Red Feather Day—on Thursday will be marked by the sixth annual joint meeting of men's civic service clubs of Greater Washington at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel. The Junior Board of Commerce of Washington will be the host club.

Beatty, Shaw to Speak

Speakers will be Morgan Beatty, NBC news analyst, and G. Howland Shaw, former Assistant Secretary of State.

As a feature of the opening week of the Chest campaign, AFL painters, carpenters and other craftsmen will donate their services Saturday morning to renovate a makeshift gymnasium and play yard at the Barney Neighborhood House, 470 N st. sw., a settlement house supported by Chest funds.

The one-day project is sponsored jointly by the Washington Building Trades Council and the Washington Building Congress to demonstrate how an individual can contribute a day's service to his community.

Citizens are being asked this year to contribute one day's take-home pay to the Chest drive.

Sunday will see the Chest message spread in about 700 churches of all faiths in Washington, Alexandria and the counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges.

'Back Home,' Trills Blonde Back in Jail She Escaped

A 17-year-old blonde girl who six months ago gave police the slip and escaped from Marlboro Jail remarked that she was "back home again" last night as police returned her to the lockup.

She was identified as Bessie Nichols—the same 5 foot 5 inch girl who turned a key in her cell lock last March while the jailer was outside, he said, "catching a breath of air."

The girl spent Sunday night in Montgomery County Jail after a juvenile agent had discovered her back at her real home in Rockville. She had been the object of a Nation-wide search since her escape. She was originally charged with aiding two youths in holding up a hacker at Brandywine, Md., last November.

Man Stabbed, Robbed While Seated in Car

Edward Parker, 33, of 933 N st. nw., was stabbed and robbed of his billfold, containing $12, while sitting in his car at 11th st. and New York ave. nw. early yesterday.

He told police two men approached him, and one stabbed him in the right temple, while the other took his wallet. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger Hospital in undetermined condition.

Meet Wednesday

Interracial Recreation To Be Studied

Interracial use of school buildings and playgrounds for recreational programs will be considered by the Board of Education Wednesday.

The board, meeting at 3:30 p. m. at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw., will consider whether it has the power to control school properties after turning them over to the Recreation Department.

Albert E. Steinem, chairman of the board's committee on community use of buildings and grounds, will present a report on two days of hearings held last May on the question. The report first will be considered by the committee at 3 p. m.

During the hearings, representatives of 30 organizations appeared and asked the school board to order the Recreation Department to open up the schools for interracial use. Seventeen groups spoke in favor of the present policy under which the school board gives the Recreational Department a free hand.

The department, which maintains segregated playgrounds, follows the same pattern in school properties.

Before the board also will be a request from the Recreation Department for the use of 62 schools from now until June for after school programs. The request is made twice each year, once at the beginning of the school year and again at the beginning of the summer vacation.

Recreation officials in their request are asking the school board to set up some permanent agreement for use of the schools.

County Fights Sale of Drink To Teen-Agers

Prince Georges County officials plan to continue a drive "with increasing intensity" against selling intoxicating liquor to minors, they said yesterday.

The number of establishments serving liquor to minors is believed small, they said, but reports of intoxication by teen-agers continue to come in.

State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie yesterday said he considers sale of liquor to a minor a "particularly reprehensible act" and that he intends prosecuting "with vigor" every such violation that comes to his attention.

Proprietors of two taverns in the county have been served warrants to appear Friday in Police Court at Upper Marlboro and have posted bonds of $500, police said. None of the principals, however, had been booked as of late yesterday at police headquarters.

The warrants were issued as result of a visit by probation officers and county police to the taverns, police said. Roy Bright, probation officer, and County Policeman Donald Forsht said teen-agers were seen drinking beer.

Included in the exhibit are numerous museum pieces and furnishings representing every period of American antiquity as well as rare articles from France and England.

Honorary patronesses for the show include Mrs. Harry Truman and Mrs. William M. Tuck, wife of the Governor of Virginia, as well as other prominent women from the District, Virginia and New York.

The show will be open daily through Friday from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Court Voids D. C. School Fees for 37 Md. Pupils

1947 Assessments For Tuition Ruled Not Applicable to Those Registered

Thirty-seven Maryland pupils enrolled in Woodrow Wilson High School here are exempt from paying tuition for the school year that began in September, 1947.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court made this ruling yesterday in granting an injunction to the pupils' parents who fought a long court action against the District government over the fees.

Authorities were unable to estimate how many other pupils would be affected by the ruling. However, all nonresident students enrolling this year are, under the new Appropriations Act, subject to a $194 a year tuition fee.

1947 Law Invoked

The case was decided on a legal provision in effect in 1947, stating that free tuition would not be given nonresidents except for "pupils who are enrolled in the schools of the District of Columbia on the date of the approval of this act." The act was approved on July 25, 1947.

The pupils involved in Judge Schweinhaut's decision had registered prior to July 25, but the District argued that Congress meant that free tuition was allowed only to those children who were actually in attendance in classes prior to that date.

Judge Schweinhaut said that if Congress had meant this, they would have said so "in so many words."

Upholds Parents

The judge commented:

"These plaintiffs had endeavored to prepare for their children's education in ample time to assure a place in the school. They were aware of the crowded conditions in the school system and they did all they could to accomplish that purpose . . . Moreover, when word came to them that tuition would be charged it is doubtful that they could have entered their children in schools outside the District except with the result that their children would have lost perhaps a half year of study."

Couple Demands Jury Trial on Tax Evasion Count

Mr. and Mrs. David Crockett, former operators of a Fairfax County tourist court, pleaded innocent in Federal District Court at Richmond yesterday to charges of evading more than $30,000 in income tax.

The defendants demanded a trial by jury on a four-count indictment returned against them last April, accusing them of concealing $80,000 of their income from 1942 through 1945.

Judge Sterling Hutchinson advised them to confer with Assistant United States Attorney Robert N. Pollard, jr., to fix an early trial date.

O'Boyle Ordains 112 as Deacons

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, yesterday ordained as deacons a class of 112 candidates in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

Ordinations have been in progress at the shrine since Thursday, when 35 seminarians were promoted to the clerical state of tonsure. Minor orders were administered to 20 on Friday morning, and 62 students for the priesthood were advanced to the order of subdeacon Saturday.

In Baseball Epic

D. C. Radio, Video Priorities Crossed Like Sox Signals

A dozen Washington radio and television executives spent an anxious hour yesterday, deciding who would and who would not air the championship baseball game between the Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox.

The home team, the Boston club had given exclusive broadcast rights for the day to the Mutual Broadcasting System, whose local outlet is WOL.

But shortly after noon, the American League ruled that the Boston club had no right to make such a contract, and that the stations which had carried the league games during the regular season had exclusive rights to the playoff contest.

Ben Strouse, WWDC manager, immediately contacted Phil Hoffman, WOL manager, and both huddled with Calvin Griffith of the Nats.

Minutes before game time, Gillette, the sponsor, canceled its plans to buy the broadcast, WWDC relinquished its rights to carry the program locally, and WOL got the green light to go ahead with its much-publicized broadcast, in exchange for "courtesy announcements" for WWDC. WOL's Hoffman conceded:

"They had us right over a barrel, but they were swell about letting us go ahead with the broadcast."

The television situation was even more confused. Du Mont (local outlet: WTTG) thought it had exclusive rights; WMAL-TV thought it had completed arrangements to carry the telecast on a sustaining basis, and WNBW thought it was out in the cold.

When it was all over, Walter Compton, WTTG manager, reported: "I don't know about the last-minute mixups in New York. All I know is that we carried the whole game, except for a brief period when the cable went bad some place between Boston and New York."

At WMAL-TV the hour before game-time was devoted to a determined effort to find out what was going on in New York, where the sponsor, the sponsor's advertising agency, the American League, and several other interested parties were making and changing plans at a furious pace.

Not until the fourth inning of the game was WMAL-TV informed that it could go ahead with its plans to carry the broadcast. By that time, the station had given up the whole idea.

But WNBW, which had no previous idea of carrying the game, was informed by New York that it would. However, there was something wrong with the cable from New York and Program Manager Charles Kelley described the result with carefully chosen words.

"Sometimes," he said, "we had sound, sometimes we had pictures, sometimes we had both sound and pictures; and at a few merciful intervals, we had neither sound nor pictures. You may quote me as saying that I am most happy that these things happen only once a year."

One station manager, who preferred to remain anonymous, confessed: "I guess I'm the only radio executive in town who enjoyed the afternoon. We didn't carry the game, so I tuned in our competitors and let them do the worrying."

Area News in Brief

Maritime Chief Unwitting Target

Vice Admiral William Ward Smith, USN (ret.), who fought the Japanese from the Coral Sea to the Aleutians and emerged unscathed, almost earned some sort of Purple Heart recently on a Washington street.

A merchant mariner, it seems, expressed his resentment over not being able to land a seagoing job by firing at (and missing) the be-ribboned Maritime Commission chairman.

The seaman fired a gun at the admiral as the latter left his home to board his limousine for his office on September 20. Smith didn't learn of the incident, until several days later when a neighbor, George D. Miller, jr., reported hearing a shot and seeing a man jam a gun into a shoulder holster and walk away.

Miller lives at 3401 34th pl. nw., and Admiral Smith diagonally across the street at 3410 Newark st. nw.

Smith said a sailor who complained that three shipping lines he formerly worked for had refused to rehire him since he was hospitalized had hung around the admiral's home and demanded action by the Maritime Commission several days before and after the incident.

The Maritime Commission head said the mariner's case had been heard by the commission and a congressional subcommittee and that the Federal agency could take no action.

The admiral noted that he was not disturbed by the potshot incident but expressed the view "I'd prefer not to earn the Purple Heart that way."

Hurt By Fire Escape

A 17-year-old boy was critically injured yesterday when the 75-pound iron counterbalance of a fire escape broke loose and struck him on the head.

The youth, Robert Cook, of 1324 14th st. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital with head injuries.

Police said he was trying to raise the fire escape on the side of a grocery store at 1301 14th st. nw., where he is employed as a delivery boy. The wire cable supporting the counterbalance snapped, and the weight struck him squarely on the back of the head, they said.

Fined for Marijuana

Walter Phipps, jr., 22, of 631 Park rd. nw., yesterday was fined $50 in Arlington County Court for possession of a marijuana cigarette and an additional $10 fine for operating a car without a permit.

Phipps was picked up in his car yesterday in the 2700 block of U. S. Highway No. 1 in Arlington by Arlington Policemen Russell Runyon and Rene Couleman for failure to have the permit. When his pockets were searched at police headquarters, the marijuana cigarette was found.

Shot in Classroom

A 15-year-old student was shot in the right leg at Armstrong High School yesterday, while he and a schoolmate were examining a .25 caliber automatic.

The boy, John Threatt, of 4221 Hayes st. ne., was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital for X-rays. His condition is not serious.

Police said William E. Moore, 15, of 864 Columbia rd. nw., was holding the gun when it discharged, while both boys were in a machine shop classroom. Moore's father, who works in a store, brought the gun home because the store was closed for the Jewish holidays, and the boy apparently took it to school to show his classmates, according to police.

Meter Dodgers Fined

Silver Spring motorists are learning the hard way that Montgomery County police are rigidly enforcing rules governing use of recently installed parking meters along Georgia ave.

Approximately 200 parking violation tickets, each carrying a $1 fine, have been issued since enforcement started October 1, police said.

$1000 Stolen

The weekend receipts of $1000 were stolen some time early yesterday from the Rio Seafood Restaurant, 740 12th st. nw., police reported. Frank Harrison, owner, said the money was taken from an unlocked file cabinet behind the bar. Entrance to the restaurant was gained by removing the glass from the skylight in the kitchen, he said.

D. C.'s Light, Heat Bill

The District Government paid out $189,020.27 to light and heat the buildings under its jurisdiction last year, according to an annual report made public by the Commissioners yesterday.

Of the total, $102,748.07 went for the light bill, at an average cost of $0.001 per kilowatt hour. The remainder went for purchase of 2183 tons of coal at an average per ton cost of $10.80; 228,353 gallons of fuel oil, at an average per gallon cost of $0.0755, and 55,538,030 pounds of purchased steam, at an average cost of $0.817 per thousand pounds.

Faces Mental Test

Thomas J. Burns, 22, of 12 5th st. ne., was ordered committed for a mental examination yesterday after he was charged in Municipal Court with assaulting a 29-year-old housewife at the 5th st. address. Originally charged with assault with intent to commit rape, the charge was reduced yesterday to simple assault.

Nurse Exonerated

Miss Geanie Sanders, 38, of 4001 7th st. ne., was found innocent of charge of larceny after trust in Bethesda police court yesterday.

The charges, police said, were made by Raoul Berger, 5121 Edgemoor la., Bethesda, who contended Miss Sanders, a nurse, failed to drive his car by agreement to Pennsylvania to pick up an elderly physician who was coming to live with them. Instead, he said in the warrant, she drove the car to North Beach, Md., and wrecked it on the return trip.

Berger has sworn out another warrant charging Miss Sanders with unauthorized use of the car, police said.

Whitehead, Retired Pepco Cashier, Dies

Edmund W. Whitehead, 76, a retired cashier with the Potomac Electric & Power Co., died yesterday at his home, 4851 Albemarle st. nw.

A native of Ohio, Mr. Whitehead became associated with the electric company here in 1901 and served continually until his retirement as cashier in 1936. He was a member of Harmony Masonic Lodge and the Church of Christ Scientist.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel O. Whitehead; one son, Edmund G. Whitehead, and a sister, Miss Elizabeth H. Whitehead.

Private funeral services will be held Wednesday, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Appeals Ruling Due on Charter Referendum Vote

A final round in the legal fight to keep the controversial proposed Montgomery County charter off the county's November 2 ballot will open today before the Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis.

The appeal, filed by Hubert A. Schneider, Bethesda attorney, has been classified "emergency" by the appeals court because the scheduled election on the "home rule" issue is only four weeks away.

According to David E. Betts, attorney representing Schneider, a final "yes" or "no" on whether a referendum may be held is expected to be handed down today or Wednesday.

Schneider's contention that the charter document is unconstitutional was upheld in part by the Montgomery County Circuit Court, but the lower court denied Schneider's request to forbid the election.

Attempted Rape Hearing Continued For Four Youths

Hearings for four Arlington teen-agers on charges of attempting to rape a 16-year-old girl were continued to Saturday in Alexandria yesterday, after a fifth youth was cleared.

United States Commissioner Stanley King dismissed the charge against an 18-year-old youth, following a brief hearing in which it was brought out that he was not with the other four at the time of the alleged assault attempt. He continued action on charges against the other four to permit a further investigation by United States Park Police.

According to the girl's complaint, the four boys tried unsuccessfully to rape her during a hectic automobile ride to Mount Vernon, and then released her near her home in Arlington with a warning that she would be killed if she mentioned the incident.

Truck Theft Charged

Two men were held for the District grand jury yesterday on a truck theft charge after police arrested them in a half-hour chase into Maryland Sunday.

The defendants, who appeared in Municipal Court are William E. Grove, 33, of 1252 10th st. nw., and David Crisso, 801 L st. nw. They were placed under $500 bond each. Grove was also fined $10 for speeding.

Employ-the-Handicapped Week Off to Rousing Start

The Washington Post

NEW KEYBOARD—John Minnick (seated), a former lieutenant, manipulates the typewriter developed by Col. Robert Allen (standing), member of the National Advisory Council of Prosthetic Devices. Minnick says it is "wonderful."

Backed by private business and the Federal Government, "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week" got off to a rousing start yesterday at a "kickoff" luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

The week-long program, aimed at gaining of public interest and support for employment of the physically handicapped, also began at the same time over the country.

Maurice J. Tobin, Secretary of Labor, told more than 300 persons the Labor Department is "proud to take a leading role" in helping to bring a greater measure of economic well-being and self-sufficiency to the handicapped.

Message From President

He carried with him a message from President Truman expressing the Chief Executive's "sincere interest in the work you are so nobly forwarding."

Secretary Tobin cited a recent survey of the Bureau of Labor Statistics which, he said, "proves conclusively that handicapped workers are equal or better employes than able bodied."

Speaking for the Labor Department, he said: "We have been highly gratified in the interest shown in the survey. We pledge our sincerest efforts that justice, and not charity; ability, not disability, shall be the passwords to economic security for the handicapped."

The man who gave the original impetus to the week seven years ago by urging Congress to establish it, Paul Strachan, himself a handicapped person, spoke briefly.

"No longer than seven years ago," he said, "American industry generally took the stand that the handicapped were undesirable as employes, because of their disabilities.

"The war changed that viewpoint under lash of manpower necessity, and a million and a half handicapped themselves, given that long-aspired-for opportunity, rose magnificently to the challenge and wrote a new page in production miracles in thousands of plants across the country."

Harold Russell Speaks

Harold Russell, who lost both hands in the war and who was one of the stars of "The Best Years of Our Lives," said:

"Let the handicapped contribute what they can to increase the strength of our Nation. It's not a question of pity—none of us wants that. It's good business to hire the physically handicapped."

Studies have proved, he declared, that disabled persons are good workers, less prone to absenteeism, are equal to and often superior to able-bodied workers in certain tasks, and have less liability to injuries.

The kickoff luncheon, held in the Mayflower's grand ballroom, was under the joint auspices of the Federation of Business Men's Associations and the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped.

Pennsylvania Colleges Alumni Form Association

More than 400 graduates of Pennsylvania Colleges banded together last night at the Statler Hotel to form the All Pennsylvania College Alumni Association of Washington.

The group determined to honor a Pennsylvanian annually with a citation for educational leadership in the State.

Dr. Herbert L. Spencer, president of Bucknell University, and Dr. Franceis B. Haas, State superintendant of public instruction, spoke briefly at the dinner held in the Presidential Room.

Alumni of 49 of Pennsylvania's 77 colleges attended the meeting with 72 persons including 15 college presidents and 12 official representatives of colleges, coming from Pennsylvania.

Fliers Uninjured As Their Plane Hits Power Line

A two-seater plane with a Washington man and woman aboard clipped a 34,000-volt power line near Lee Airport, blacking out lower Anne Arundel County for 48 minutes Sunday night.

Pilot Homer L. Blanks, 29, 1831 Wyoming ave. nw., and Miss Dolores Harrison, 25, 1839 Wyoming ave. nw., "were very fortunate" to step out uninjured when their Taylorcraft Cub crashed to the runway, Airport Manager John W. Tyler said.

It was the third crash in 16 months involving the power lines, according to Tyler, who said a 30-foot red-lighted warning pole will be in operation within a few days.

T. A. Daly Dies At 77; Poet And Humorist

Philadelphia, Oct. 4 (AP).—Thomas Augustine Daly, 77, poet, humorist, lecturer and journalist, died today after a long illness.

It was for his Italian dialect verse that Daly became famous. He acquired an accurate ear for the broken English of immigrants as a grocer's clerk during boyhood and as a young newspaper reporter whose beat took him into Italian-American sections of Philadelphia.

His reputation as a humorist was exemplified in "Between Two Loves":

I gotta love for Angela
I love Carlotta, too
I no can marry both o' dem
So w'at I gonna do?

He joined the staff of the Evening Bulletin in 1929 and authored "Rhymes and Ripples."

Daly was stricken with a heart attack last January, but he continued with his tasks until he suffered a light stroke August 14.

Transatlantic-Flight Pioneer Dies at 62

London, Oct. 4 (AP).—Sir Arthur Whitten-Brown, 62, one of the first two men to fly the Atlantic, died today in his London apartment, apparently of a heart attack.

With the late Sir John Alcock, he flew from Newfoundland to the west coast of Ireland on June 15, 1919, in a flight that made aviation history and predated by some eight years the much more publicized solo flight of Charles A. Lindbergh from New York to Paris.

Both Sir John and Sir Arthur were members of the Royal Air Force. They flew a Vicker-Clmy converted bomber and made the crossing in 16 hours. Both were knighted for it.

Sir John was killed in an accident in France last year. Sir Arthur's only son was killed while serving in the RAF during World War II.

Today, the wife of the famous flier found him dead in bed.

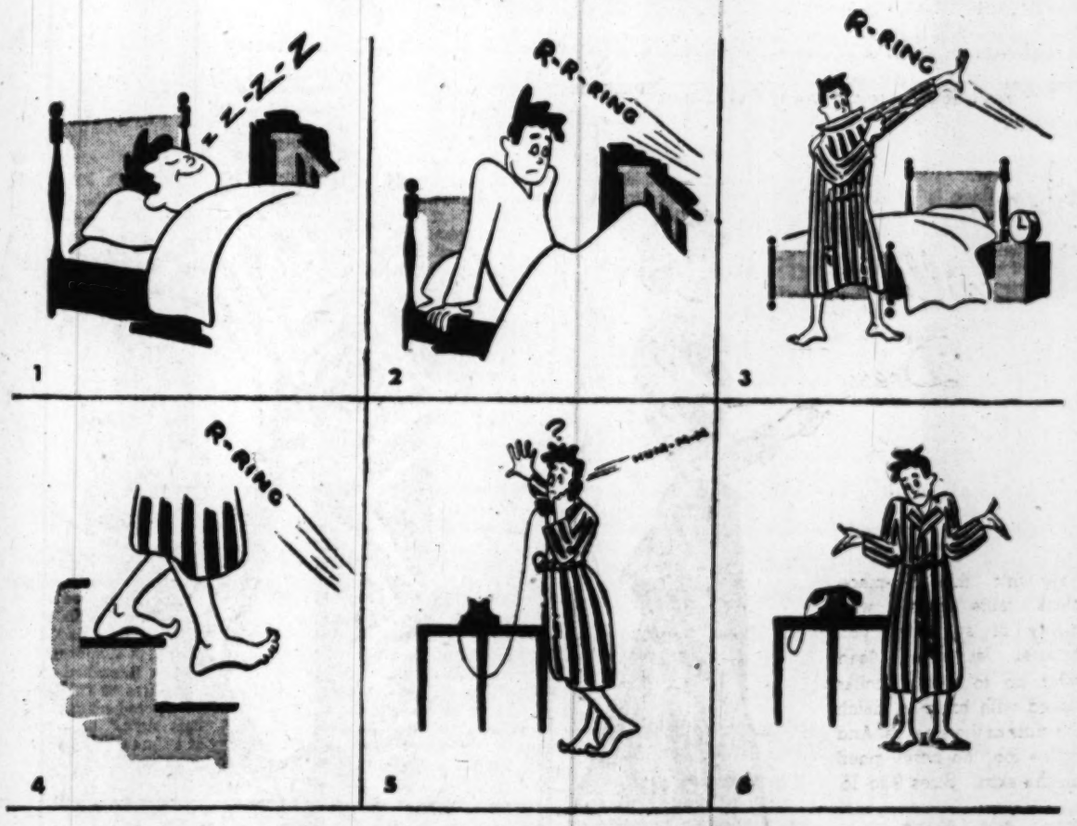
THE COLD STAIR



He needs an Extension Telephone. Do you?

A conveniently placed extension keeps your telephone within easy reach, regardless of the hour. It's a real time and step saver. And it may prevent you from missing important calls.

It's reassuring to know, too, that the telephone is always handy in case of emergency.

When you add up all the "extras" an extension telephone provides, you'll agree it's more than worth the small monthly cost of this service. Call our Business Office for complete information.

Why you can get an Extension Telephone while some folks are still waiting for telephone service

No new orders for telephone service are being held up for lack of telephone instruments. It is the need for additional central office equipment, cable and other outside plant that is temporarily holding us back. We'll be able to fill new orders for service as rapidly as those facilities can be enlarged. It's a big job, but we're working harder than ever to complete it. We don't like to keep anyone waiting for telephone service.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother Is Concerned for Health of Girl, 18, Who Is Terrified of Germs and Acts Almost as If She Sees Them; Is This Rational Behavior?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter Alice, 18, is terrified of germs. I think she sees 'em; at least she acts as if she does. And she is never on time for anything, not even Sunday school or church, and when I say never, I mean just that.

She is a very pretty girl but has few friends, and she never goes to picnics or eats out because of flies. She is always washing her hands with soap, and with handwashing and bath, she uses two cakes of soap a day.

Her table silver must be laid on paper napkins at her place every meal; if it isn't, she won't touch it; yet we use a linen table cloth, changed every day. She uses one chair, I don't know why, but it is one I seldom use.

Girl Shrinks From Touching Anything

SHE WILL not wear a dress without pockets, and in the pockets she carries paper handkerchiefs which she uses in opening and closing doors, and if she has no kerchiefs, she pushes the light switch with her elbow. She doesn't touch anything she doesn't have to, and when she is freshly bathed and dressed to go somewhere, she seems almost afraid to move lest she contact grime.

When I sew for her, the material must not touch floor or chairs; there are only a few places I may lay it, and I must wash my hands specially to handle her sewing, even if I just came from washing them. She has always been very particular but I think she is going too far, and when I tell her how awful it looks, she says I nag her, and she says the same when I try to push her into being punctual.

I am very worried about her behavior. Is it natural? Should I let her have her way? I have two other children who don't act like that, but she is always chiding them. She did good work in high school and now she wants to go to college, but I don't think she is well enough. What is your advice? C. H.

Girl's Anxiety Form of Illness

DEAR C. H.: You have cause to be actively concerned about Alice, but nagging criticism of her frightened behavior is unjustified. It amounts to a symptom, which she can no more repress than a person coming down with mumps could prevent his glands from swelling.

She is a very sick girl; not physically sick, perhaps, aside from the low vitality that usually attends chronic anxiety states, but rather sick in the realm of personality, and before we go further, please understand that mind and emotions are as liable to illness as the body, a truism that all good diagnosticians are beginning to take into account in ministering to the health of human nature.

You say of Alice that she has always been "very particular," but more recently you think she is going too far in her phobic accent on cleanliness, which is artless testimony to the effect that Alice has been incipiently sick with a compulsive-neurotic affliction for years, and now her distress is growing worse, more complex and more acute, for lack of appropriate remedial treatment.

Specialist Care Urgently Needed

IN SEARCH of authoritative guidance, I reviewed your letter with a specialist who immediately grasped the general significance, or medical classification, of Alice's inordinately anxious behavior, and who remarked: 1. Such illness is not uncommon. 2. It calls for psychiatric management. 3. In an encouraging number of cases it is being brought under control when competently treated in time. 4. Expertly supervised home care is sufficient to rehabilitate the patient in some instances; in others, hospitalization for intensive therapy is necessary.

Thus indirectly the doctor sustains your theory that Alice isn't in condition to undertake college work without precautionary health care at this time, and in fact mentioned that if she is to continue her studies, it would be wise to consider special schools designed to benefit maladjusted persons.

You write from a city where civic leaders have pioneered in providing psychiatric services for the community, and where the quality of such service is up to the best modern standards; so help for Alice is near at hand, and my advice is to ask the central (mental hygiene) clinic where to find it. M. H.

Daily Half Dozen Exercises Slim Bulges, Fill in Hollows

By Ida Jean Kain

WHETHER it's hollows or bulges you've got, a daily halfdozen hits the right spot! That's the calisthenics commercial for the day, and here's the guarantee: With calories adjusted to size, the plump girl, the thin girl and the normal weight can all take the same toner-uppers and get beautiful results.

Now for the exciting offer you can't afford to miss—a set of slimmers that will work figure magic. Regardless of weight, tune in here.

To cover the collarbone . . .

Lift a couple of books, equal weight, and stand erect but at ease, arms extended in front of body shoulder-width apart and straight, and a book held in each hand. Slowly lift arms up overhead and swing them slightly back, just past the ears, hold and reach—look up—with an extra pull on the pectorals. Then lower. Try it again, maybe six times, later 12 will be easy.

With a twist of the waist . . .

Stand upright with feet wide apart, body "lifted" through midriff, arms out at sides in line with shoulders. Hold it. Now without moving the hips, twist gently at the waist to face toward the right; swing back, again pivoting at the waist, and twist gently to face left. Don't make it a rhumba! Keep hips still and keep midriff lifted.

To tighten midriff muscles . . .

Ah, to streamline the hips . . .

Lie on side on floor with one leg straight down on floor, top leg drawn up toward chest. Thrust the top leg downward vigorously and pull up with the other leg. Keep pedaling for 12 or 25 counts, rest, and repeat on other side. This is an easy-to-do version of the old bicycle. It not only tones the hip muscles but also puts gimp in the middle muscles.

Finish workout by shaking the tension out of the muscles. Shake arms loosely and shake alternate legs loosely from the hips. Then flop forward two or three times at the waist.

Nurse's Aides To Be Trained By Red Cross

A new daytime Red Cross Nurse's Aide class, to train volunteer workers for service in Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, will open on Wednesday, October 13, according to Mrs. Ernest Markwalter, chairman of the District Red Cross Nurse's Aide Service.

Mrs. Markwalter said that the class, which is still open for registration, will be taught at Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave.

The classes will be held from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

Those interested in working as Nurse's Aides at Mount Alto should call the Nurse's Aide Service, Republic 8300, Extension 371, for further information.

This is not only the first Red Cross Nurse's Aide class of the fall season, but the first Nurse's Aide class trained for service at the Mount Alto Veterans Hospital since the war, Mrs. Markwalter said.

The Nurse's Aides—who are required to sign for a minimum of 150 hours of service a year—work directly with the hospitalized veterans under the supervision of the hospital's professional staff. They are required to take 35 hours of classroom instruction, given by a registered nurse, and then serve 45 hours under the hospital's professional staff, before they become full-fledged Nurse's Aides.

All persons interested in doing hospital work as a Red Cross Nurse's Aide may call at the Chapter House, 1730 E st. nw., today or Wednesday for the special screenings being held in connection with the Volunteer Services Drive for volunteers.

In this drive, the Nurse's Aide Service, alone, is seeking a total of 121 volunteers to work in hospitals and in the Blood Center.

All volunteers for Red Cross service in Mount Alto Veterans, United States Soldiers Home and Walter Reed hospitals may be interviewed at the chapter house from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. today. On Wednesday, other Walter Reed applicants will be interviewed from 1 to 4 p. m. At the same time, chairman of the other Red Cross services will be on hand to interview applicants for their services.

Aristocratic Pigeons Will Do Fancy Flying At Annual Lawn Party

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SOME three hundred of the fanciest fliers in these parts will pull their most spectacular stunts for free Sunday afternoon, October 10, on and above Elisha Hanson's lawn at 9401 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda. Mr. H., who is counsel for the American Newspaper Publishers Association and handles, among many interesting cases, lawsuits involving freedom of the press, has a most fascinating sideline—he is president of the National Capital Pigeon Fanciers Association. Next Sunday's "lawn party" is their annual show and it's going to be quite a "do."

To this department a pigeon is either a delicious mouthful savored with currant jelly or a pushy bird who hangs around angling for a handout. But, it seems, artistocratic pigeons are, in more ways than one, birds of another feather! After consultation with Raymond Crowley, member of the show committee, we've turned up the following facts: Fantails, who spread their tails like peacocks, are natural-born snobs, holding their noses so high their heads actually rest on their backbones. Pouters can puff out their chests to the dimensions of a good-sized grapefruit. Oriental Frills are possibly the only birds sufficiently elegant and extravagant as to make baby sitters a necessity! They have such short beaks that they can't feed their fledglings—so more plebian pigeons are pressed into service. This is how it works—breeders switch the valuable Oriental Frill eggs with those of a commoner, longer beaked bird which, quite innocently, cares for them through squabhood. Meanwhile, the Oriental Frills satisfy their domestic yearnings with lower class babies who get along as best they can, the tougher ones surviving, the weaker brothers tapering off through undernourishment.

Russian Trumpeteers have a disconcerting habit of laughing instead of cooing. Gene Younkin of Arlington who breeds them reports that one of his Slavic squabs, a white female, recently stopped laughing. A "White Russian," she's terribly discouraged about the Berlin crisis!

White Kings produce squabs weighing over a pound each—and naturally, since rising meat prices, have become the most popular of all the fancy breeds. Runts are whimsically named because they're the largest pigeons extant. However, their squabs are ordinary size.

The Parlor Tumblers

EVERYONE knows about the Racing Homers who fly messages undeterred through shot and shell, but very few have heard about Parlor Tumblers. These obliging birds turn somersaults at the snap of their owner's fingers! But these babes are nothing compared to Birmingham Rollers. They somersault in mid-air, whizzing over and over so rapidly they look like pinwheels. An owner, who must remain nameless, reports that owning a few of these birds has cut his liquor bills at least 50 per cent. At cocktail parties he serves just one round, then brings on his pigeons! Ninety-nine out of a hundred guests take a gander, blink, decide they'd better switch to soft drinks! Some Birminghams, obvious exhibitionists, can somersault and land in the same spot, some somersault in mid-air, others do a couple of rolls and land 20 feet or more from where they started.

Washington's roster of pigeon fans includes Phillip Roof, who works in the office of the Capital's architect, William Pennington, and who specializes in Racing Homers; George Black and William Rebelle, who go in for Rollers; Sidney Earle, an Oriental Friller. Mr. Hanson, incidentally, is a firm believer in hobbies as mental relaxation. "Show me a man who has no hobby," he says, "and I'll show you a man headed for St. Elizabeth's!" Hobbyless gents beware—hustle and and buy a brace of Birmingham Rollers!

Middle East—Never

ELIAHU EPSTEIN, the representative of the Israeli government to Washington, is a friendly person who enjoys chatting with taxi drivers. On a recent ride he drew an unusually loquacious character who immediately started a political chinfest. Pausing for breath he turned and asked his fare where he came from. Mr. Epstein, sure that if he said Palestine an even more complicated tirade would ensue, replied non-committally, "Oh, I'm from the Middle East." "Middle East!" snorted the taxi driver, suspiciously, "I've heard of the Middle West but the Middle East, never!"

Kay Summersby Expected

WAC chauffeur-secretary to General Eisenhower, Kay Summersby's book came off the press Monday and if advance sales are any indication it'll be a topflight best seller. The handsome Kay, in tow of Kenneth Giniger, publicity director of Prentice Hall, the book's publisher, is coming to town October 9 and at 4:30 p. m. will autograph copies of her tome over in Alexandria at Chequire House, 202 King st. The following day she'll make two broadcasts here in Washington, then skip back to New York. Here's hoping Miss Summersby will sell thousands and thousands of books and continue to give short shrift to such nonworking members of her own sex who criticized the gals who served in uniform overseas!

Try Bananas in 'Broiler Meal'

A happy combination for a broiler meal right now is broiled bananas, broiled tomatoes and hamburger patties.

For cooking, select a banana that is not fully ripe. To tell when bananas are right for cooking, look at the peel. If the peel is all-yellow or green-tipped, the banana is just right for an oven trip.

BANANA MIXED GRILL

4 hamburger patties, 1 inch thick
4 firm bananas, peeled
2 large, firm tomatoes, cut in half
Melted butter
Salt

Arrange hamburger patties and tomato halves that have been brushed with butter and salted lightly on preheated broiler rack. Place about 5 inches below the heat. Broil 6 to 8 minutes or until meat is browned. Turn meat. Brush bananas with butter and sprinkle lightly with salt. Place bananas on rack with meat and tomato halves. Continue broiling about 8 minutes longer or until bananas are tender . . . easily pierced with a fork.

Ask Anne About Pressure Cooking Methods

Would you please publish directions for frying mature chickens in 15 minutes, using a pressure cooker? A. L. G.

Roll the cut-up chicken in flour to which salt has been added and brown in fat in the pressure sauce pan. When thoroughly browned, add one cup of water, cover and bring to 15 pounds pressure. Cook 12 minutes. Before serving, crisp the chicken by removing remaining liquid and heating the chicken in the uncovered pan.

Please tell me how bed valances are devised. I mean the Colonial pleated or ruffled kind that hang to the floor all around and over which a very small quilt or spread is used. How are they attached to the bed? I'd like the kind that are more or less permanent and do not have to be rearranged every morning or taken off at night. I do not have box springs. V. M.

The type of valances you have in mind are attached on all sides to a piece of heavy material the exact size of the mattress. This is then placed between the spring and mattress so that the ruffle or pleated piece would drop only the distance form the top of the spring to the floor. With the uncovered spring this foundation piece of material will get harder wear than with a box mattress, so would suggest you use some heavy durable material for it. It could be made from an old blanket or quilt which has passed its years of usefulness as such, for the foundation will not show.

A few days ago in your column you mentioned making hooked or braided rugs from old stockings. Will you please go into more detail of the process of dyeing, cutting and using stockings for making rugs? L. G. F.

Dye the stockings first by using a good commercial dye. For use in rugs it is well to boil the dye into the stockings so that the color will be more permanent. If you wish to use brilliant colors, you should remove the stocking color before dyeing by the use of a commercial color remover sold where the dyes are sold. When the stockings are dyed and thoroughly dry, cut them into strips, starting at the top and cutting in a spiral downward so that each stocking makes just one strip. When you cut, if the stocking is heavier at the top, cut the strip where narrower so it will be the same finished weight as the wider strip cut in the thinner places. Now, if you are making a hooked rug these strips can be used as they are. If you plan to make a crocheted rug, sew the strips together and wrap into a ball before you start to crochet.

I have several baby sweaters that have become a little stiff from improper washing. Is there anything I can do for them to soften them up? E. B.

Adding sodium perborate to the water in which the sweaters are washed will help to soften the wool. Use four level tablespoons of the perborate to each quart of soapy water. Sodium perborate is a bleach if used in larger quantities so do not allow the sweaters to stand in it and take care to rinse them thoroughly. It can be purchased at most drug stores. Another way to soften them is to roll in a towel and squeeze while wet to remove most of the moisture. Then, several times during the drying process shake or rub between the hands to fluff.

I have a white enamel bottle sterilizer which I haven't used for several years. The bottle rack has become rusted and the bottom of the sterilizer is discolored. Can you tell me if there is any way to re-enamel it, or can you suggest some other method of putting it back into good condition again? M. R.

It is not possible to re-enamel the sterilizer. However, you will probably very much improve its appearance if you will rub the discolored parts with fine steel wool soap pads and cleansing powder. Or, allowing a solution of household bleach and water to stand in the enamel container for 30 minutes will lighten and possibly remove the stain. As for the wire rack, you can remove the rust from that by using one of the rust removal products on the market or rubbing it with steel wool. When rust has been removed, about the only way to keep it from returning is to be sure that the rack is completely dried after each use.

I have two demitasse cups in Limoges China (the "chocolate cup" size and shape) and I am interested in adding to the collection. My family has made it a practice to collect odd cups of this type and use them in serving demitasse. However, my husband had never heard of this custom before we were married and does not feel it would be correct at formal occasions. Would you tell me whether it is considered good taste to serve demitasse in mis-marked cups of this type at formal and informal dinners? S. T. M.

As an enthusiastic collector of odd cups and saucers, I am glad to assure your husband that they can be correctly used when serving formal or informal dinners. As a matter of fact, some of the fine china shops display sets of such cups, each one with a different design, but intended for use together.

Warns Against Apathy

GOP Leader Says Women Fail to Exercise Power

By Genevieve Reynolds

Mrs. Charles W. Weis, jr., associate manager of the Dewey-Warren campaign, yesterday warned against apathy and overconfidence in an address at the opening session of the Republican Women's League of the District of Columbia held in the Mayflower Hotel.

"Registration across the country is reported down," she explained. "Some people think that bodes well for a Republican victory. But I think every citizen should get out and vote in the November elections."

The slender, handsome, whitehaired politico, who also is New York State National committee woman, asserted that women are not using their political power and privileges. "A lot of women beat their breasts and squall for equal rights and opportunities or boast that they have a million and a half more votes than men," she said, "yet, one million less women than men have registered to cast their ballot in the forthcoming elections."

She told the all-feminine audience, "I don't think we (Republican Party) can sit on the defensive. We must get on the aggressive. And don't let people talk against the Eightieth Congress and party candidates without challenging the validity of their statements.

Work Is Needed

"We can win," she continued, "if we get out and work."

Terming the Dewey-Warren ticket "the dream team," Mrs. Weis lauded the two GOP candidates. "One preoccupation of Dewey and Warren can do the best possible for the greatest number of people, irrespective of pressure groups," she averred. "To me that is the overriding greatness of the party's presidential and vice presidential candidates."

Praising Dewey's record as New York Governor, she pointed out that 242 women hold key positions in the State government. "I am conscious that women have to know and do twice as much as men before men will admit they know half as much," she added. "The fact that our Governor has selected women strictly because of ability augurs well for our sex when Dewey gets in the White House."

Mrs. Weis said that Governor Dewey was the first to start a college for veterans . . . that he had instituted three fourths of the recommendations made by farmers . . . that labor relations in the State had been excellent under his regime.

Remarking tthat Dewey knows the problems of the farmer because he is one, Mrs. Weis in an aside remark quipped, "I am not going to talk about farming; I am a city slicker. I think more politicians make mistakes trying to talk about cows and pigs and other farming data that they don't know anything about than any other subject."

'Humanizing' Tax

"Humanizing income tax deductions is another Dewey accomplishment," she said. "For example, most States do not allow deductions for children over 18 years of age. Yet the heavy expense starts about that time when they are entering college. The Empire State now permits these deductions from income."

Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., National Committee Woman for the District of Columbia, introduced the speaker and announced that the GOP will hold an open campaign rally tonight, 8:15 o'clock in the Mayflower Hotel. Senator Robert Taft and Mrs. Weis will be principal speakers. Special music will be furnished by the Capitol Hill Treble Shooters.

Mrs. Edmund S. Kockersperger, first vice president of league, presided in the absence of Mrs. Joseph R. Farrington, league head, who now is at her home in Honolulu.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

CONFIDENT of a GOP victory in November are these party leaders who gathered for the opening session of the District of Columbia League of Republican Women yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel. In the group are (left to right) Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., national committeewoman for the District; Mrs. Charles W. Weis, jr., associate manager of the Dewey-Warren campaign, who was principal speaker at the event, and Mrs. Edmund S. Kocher-sperger, first vice president of the league, who presided in the absence of Mrs. Joseph B. Farrington, president

Branch AAUW Makes Plans For Setting Up Clubhouse

The Washington Branch, American Association of University Women, at its first business meeting of the season yesterday voted to organize three new committees to aid in setting up new headquarters.

A committee will be named to pass on offers of furniture for the new clubhouse, yet to be selected; another to receive loans, and another to formulate rules and policies for the club. Mrs. G. R. Wilhelm, past president of the Washington branch, heads the house-hunting committee.

Due to a split with the national organization over membership policies, the local branch must move from its present clubroom, which it shares with the parent organization at 1624 I st. nw. Forty per cent of the national clubhouse operating expense has been paid by the Washington branch for joint use.

The controversy arose in October, 1946, when the District branch refused to readmit Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, well-known Negro leader. Mrs. Terrell had been a member of the Washington group when it was first organized as an alumnae association, but had dropped out because of pressure of public and family duties.

Mrs. Clarence F. Swift, a member of the AAUW branch who had been a close friend of Mrs. Terrell at Oberlin College about 60 years ago, presented the distinguished Negro woman's application for membership into the Washington branch. When the Washington group turned down Mrs. Terrell's application, the national organization stepped into the breach, maintaining that an eligible Negro woman could not be excluded.

A District court order prohibited explusion of the Washington branch from the national AAUW until such time as the by-laws are changed making it obligatory to admit eligible Negro women.

National, however, has given the Washington branch until October 31 to find new headquarters.

Democrats Hear Dutch Leader

Dr. William F. Zeylman van Emmichonen, founder and head of the People's Institute in Holland, yesterday expressed a belief that it is impossible to have cooperation with the peoples of Russia as long as the Communists are in power. He made his observation in a luncheon address before members of the Women's National Democratic Club, where he appeared as principal speaker.

The speaker said that in dealing with the modern Russian government, "you have to work with programs rather than personalities."

He told of the institute's project of having eminent men of many countries describe the psychology of their peoples. "The Russians were invited to contribute a chapter but did not answer," he explained. "Only the White Russians can write freely on the subject."

Dr. Zeylman van Emmichonen helped to found an institute for the express purpose of promoting psychological understanding of the peoples of the world. Now located in Holland, he expressed a hope that it could be expanded into an international institution.

"There can be no real cooperation in the world until the various peoples understand each others' psychology and words," he declared. "Take the word freedom. It has a different connotation for the Dutch, German, Belgium, Chinese, Russians, Swiss, British and Americans. . . ."

Tracing the history of the Netherlands to illustrate that the Dutch always have prized inner freedom and independence of action, he said that this love for freedom and independence made them fight against the Nazi occupation.

Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, introduced the speaker and Mrs. Paul Porter, first vice president, presided in the absence of the president.

Following the main speaker, Mrs. William H. Davis, former club president, exhorted the members to get out and campaign vigorously for the "Truman-Barkley ticket."

Asserting that "Dewey is a man with no personal integrity", she predicted dire consequences if he is elected President.

Mrs. Davis told club members that Dewey had made two "boners" the atomic energy speech and the one concerning Italian colonies.

Death Laughs at Fools Who Drive and Drink

Death laughed at me in city streets;
The red lights passed me by.
And warning signs were silly things
For one about to die.

The empty bottle lay beneath
My cold and numbing feet.
I failed to hear the warning cry
And died there, in the street.

So now I lay upon a slab,
My wisdom newly found.
But it's too late; they'll soon be here
To put me under ground.

* * * *

I wake to find 'twas just a dream
Designed to make me think;
A dream that taught me how Death laughs
At fools who drive and drink.
Pop Grey.

LOST CORD

Ginny LaMaster of 321 34th st. ne. is fit to be tied. I hope she's knot stringing us along, but she reports that she needs some help in remembering the name of the musical selection played by the pianist in the movie "Rope."

MISCELLANY

It's hard for most of us to start thinking about Christmas while the weather is so mild, but Kathryn W. Hughes of 223 Holly ave., Takoma Park, Md., is back at work again—on the scores of dolls that she distributes each Christmas to the kids at Children's Hospital. Last year more than 75 beautifully dressed dolls (and other toys and books, etc.) were distributed. This year, Kathryn will need additional help, to take care of the increased hospital population occasioned by the summer's polio toll . . . Elizabeth W. Keech of 6049 Brooke rd. has a reminder for District Liners, who have called too late to get Give-Away pets: The local dog pound has about 100 nice dogs which can be claimed for a reasonable fee . . . The recently organized Securities and Exchange Commission American Legion Post 65 is sponsoring a dance at the Wardman Park Friday night (dress optional, Meyer Davis' Orchestra, tickets $1.50 each). Reservations may be made with Sally Bossen (Sterling 7600, extension 3121, during working hours, or Woodley 9888 in the evening) . . . Jere R. Alexander of 1317 S. 28th st., Arlington, Va., has a letter from the DAV stating that 935 was the winning score in the puzzle contest (as indicated in this space weeks ago) and that the words ettu, etto, sets, fets, tets and tetr were NOT acceptable. If you're in doubt about words you used, inquiry should be made of the sponsors of the contest—not me. The local address is 1701 18th st. nw. . . . N. Green of 4327 N. Pershing dr., Arlington, Va., sends along an uproariously funny item (too long to reprint) from the September 27 issue of Chemical and Engineering News. It's about a brand-new invention: prefabricated holes—ready-made cellar excavations, wells, post holes, and even worm holes, for unscrupulous antique dealers.

FOR POOR PEOPLE ONLY

bone steak, but my memory doesn't go back that far. Does yours? (Bankers, disk jockeys, numbers writers and other rich people are disqualified on this item. They've been eating the T-bones I've missed).

"DON'T DO AS I DO; DO AS I TELL YOU"

The Department of the Army recently circulated a memorandum to its typists, on the subject of "Frequently Mispelled Words."

Things like the misspelling of "mispell" tickle my funny-bone. Like the time a city editor back in Ohio circulated a memorandum to the effect that "bad spelling will not be tollerated."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

In giving the news on the radio, Bill Jenkins recently said:

"She has 12 children; 6 girls, 5 boys and a baby."

How come? James Cooper, 1107 Staples st. ne.

Dear Jim:

By the time the twelfth kid arrives, it doesn't make much difference any more. It's six of one and half-dozen of the other.

Bill.

ANOTHER RED EXPOSE

I stopped to ask for directions yesterday, and got the inevitable response:

"Go down this road to the first red light, then turn left to the third red light, and you can't miss it."

I can't help but wonder why I must always chart my course by red lights, when it would be so much more pleasant to look for green lights, or even just plain traffic lights.

When I'm armed with directions like that and come to a green light, I always feel as if I'd be a traitor to my benefactor if I didn't wait for the light to turn red before continuing on my way.

But what really riles me is that parting phrase, "You can't miss it." What a laugh! I not only can miss 'em, I do. I couldn't track an elephant in three feet of snow.

On my first day in Washington, I was trying to find Robert K. Richards (now with the National Association of Broadcasters) who was in the office of censorship in the Apex Building.

I got up to the corner of Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. and still couldn't find the Apex Building. So I asked a passerby. He didn't know. I stopped another; he didn't know, either.

Finally, I went into a building marked "Federal Trade Commission" and asked there. That was it.

NEW YORK—When Hugo Black, jr., son of the U. S. Supreme Court Justice, was at college last year he said that his ambition was to become a secretary to a Supreme Court Justice. "If you go to law school," Justice Stanley Reed promised him, "and if you make the Law Review, you'll be my secretary." Black enrolled at Yale Law School. Because of his marks he was tapped for the Yale Review last week. And next year, pursuant to his promise, Stanley Reed will make Hugo Black, jr., his secretary—the first time a Justice's son will become secretary to another Justice.

Lieut. Col. Cleo Straight, who initiated the review proceedings in the Ils Koch case, will tell the Senate committee that his conscience is clear and that he did the right thing . . . Because of the new crisis in Argentine-American relations, Ambassador Bruce has cut short his trip here and flown back to Buenos Aires . . . Rex Tugwell, after wavering about Henry Wallace, finally has made up his mind. He'll accept the Progressive Party post and campaign actively for Wallace . . . The SEC is making a quiet investigation of stock dealings in a company once controlled by Serge Rubenstein.

Gary Davis, former Air Force officer who surrendered his American citizenship, has become ill as a result of his siege on the steps of the building where the U. N. is meeting. Davis, whose ouster was ordered by the French government, has received a three months' extension and moved his bed-roll indoors, into the apartment of a friend in Paris.

Bob Hope was scheduled to appear in a radio dramatization of Jim Thurber's baseball story, "You Can Look It Up," for the Hallmark Playhouse October 7. Hope is one of the owners of the Cleveland Indians. And because the Thurber story is about a manager who loses the pennant, Hope refused to do the Thurber story. A compromise was effected yesterday—Hope will do Ring Lardner's "Elmer The Great," about a ball player who wins the pennant.

Leland Hayward, producer of "Mr. Roberts," was discussing the problems of a play producer. "You get the scripts you believe to be the finest, hire the best director, the best scenic designer, the best cast and you put $100,000 of your money into it, and months of hard work," said Haywood . . . "And on opening night, when the lights dim and the curtain starts rising, a screen seems to rise inside your head and you suddenly shriek: 'Omygosh, what have I done?'"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Where Does GOP Get Its Money?

By Drew Pearson

This is the story of how one Republican bucked a lot of other powerful Republicans in the State of Michigan.

Pearson

It's an important story because it throws light on the question of who really pays the bills and pulls the strings behind the GOP scenes. It happens also to be a story where this columnist sat backstage.

One Michigan newspaper recently waved its editorial pen under the nose of U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark and accused him of leaking certain inside facts about the Michigan scandals to this columnist.

The "leak," however, was the other way around. This column leaked to Tom Clark, not Tom Clark to the column. In fact, this column's readers may recall that for more than a year it has been delving into the Senator Hooper murder case and other strange goings-on in Michigan.

The alleged leak pertained to violation of the Corrupt Practices Act by Buick's vice president, W. F. Hufsteader, General Motors' lawyer, Harry Gault, and GOP National Committeeman Arthur Summerfield, who also happens to be the biggest Chevrolet dealer in the world.

Judge Gets Cold Feet

These big GOP whipcrackers were under investigation by another Republican, Michigan's Attorney General Eugene Black, when suddenly Judge Philip Elliott, of Flint, got cold feet. Hastily he dropped his one-man grand jury and ordered Black to return all records showing violation of the Corrupt Practices Act.

It was at that point, last July, that this columnist went to the Justice Department and urged that it take up the Michigan scandals where courageous, beleaguered Mr. Black had left off.

At first the Justice Department moved like molasses. Michigan newspapers are now accusing Tom Clark of playing politics because of his probe of Michigan. But if there was any Justice Department enthusiasm for jumping into the Michigan political pot, this writer couldn't detect it. The Federal boys hemmed, hawed and hesitated before wading gingerly into the hot Michigan water.

Fudge Sales Taxes

To get the full picture of the Michigan scandals you have to turn back to 1944 when go-getting GOP leader Summerfield announced a drive to raise $500,000. From then until now, a large hunk of the Republican National Committee's dough has come out of Michigan, much of it from automobile dealers and manufacturers.

More recently, a Detroit grand jury has shown that Michigan auto dealers fudged on their sales taxes to the tune of several million dollars. They simply "forgot" to pay the State. And Michigan Attorney General Black, the lonely clean-up Republican, claims that this reneging on sales taxes was the payoff for big campaign contributions.

Black, therefore, moved to open up the smelly mess. A Republican himself, he started to call a spade a spade.

Governor Sigler, also Republican, promptly denied Black $35,000 he needed to investigate the campaign frauds.

And when Black dug up $12,498 unexpended money left over from 1947, the GOP State auditor clamped down an order that this money could not be used to probe GOP campaign funds.

Every conceivable obstacle was put in Black's path. However, with a limited staff, he proceeded with his investigation of the manner in which the automobile industry of Michigan illegally financed and dominated the Republican Party in Michigan. This investigation was before Judge Philip Elliott in Flint, a State court.

Judge Protects Friends

Suddenly Judge Elliott got cold feet. As stated earlier, he abruptly adjourned his grand jury with the amazing explanation that criminal action might be brought against some of his friends.

This weird excuse brought sarcastic comment from two other Michigan State judges. Commented Judge W. McKay Skillman in Detroit:

"I never recall having heard that excuse before."

Remarked Judge Joseph Moynihan, presiding Circuit Court judge of Michigan: "I have never, in all the years I have been connected with the law, heard of a judge withdrawing from a case because that case might involve friends or so-called friends." He added that he was "amazed and shocked."

What made Judge Elliott's face blanch as he beat his hasty retreat from the grand jury probe was the sight of various canceled checks contributed by his own auto friends in Flint. On their face they were violations of the Corrupt Practices Act.

Canceled Checks Hidden

Judge Elliot not only dropped his grand jury probe as if he had seen a ghost, but he sent a telegram to Attorney General Black ordering him to return the canceled checks and all financial records of the various auto companies.

It was at this point that this columnist beat on the door of the Justice Department in Washington and urged that since State officials in Michigan refused to investigate the Michigan mess, the Federal Government should move in.

Note—While the Justice Department tried to make up its mind, Attorney General Black in Michigan kept three sets of records of the canceled checks in three different places, so that if Gov. Sigler's State police moved in, at least one copy of the records would remain out of their reach.
